

In answer to the question, "Can a College View apartment be made livable?" Mr. and Mrs. Warren Goulas have proven that the apartment can not only be made livable but attractive as well. Goulas is a senior architecture student.

Couple Devises Method For Improving Apartment

By PAT MORELY BATTALION WOMAN'S EDITOR

An enthusiastic couple in A-1-Y, Warren and Dolores "Dodie" Goulas, "have proved what so many others long to prove"—that a College View apartment CAN be beautiful! When fifty-odd barracks buildings were moved from Houston to A&M in 1946, skeptics cried that no amount of ingenuity could change drab barracks apartments into anything but drab barracks apartments. Since that time, many stout-hearted couples have manned paint brushes and sewing machines, trying to give that "decorator" look to their college homes. Of that number, all too many have "given up", deciding that ingenuity works best when supplemented with a chest of family jewels with which to buy the materials they needed. Warren and Dodie, without benefit of previous decorating experience OR family jewels, have made their "four walls" into a charming, cheerful home for themselves and their three-month-old son, Greg.

As in most homes, the heart is the living room, and on it no pains were spared in the Goulas' apartment. Hard work and resourcefulness turned the trick. Warren made all the major pieces of furniture in a course (ME 105) here at A&M. Dolores worked with him to complete the stylish decorations.

While many people moan that without money "we can't make that place look decent!" Warren made a buffet, coffee table, couch, and a closed wall bookcase—for a $13 expense to the family budget! Furthermore, he had never before made a single piece of furniture! When friends ask Warren how he did such a splendid job on his first attempt, he modestly says, "They have mighty good tools over there at the shop."

The handsome buffet, which holds all the family linens, dishes, and silver, is natural walnut, with sliding masonite panels painted fuschia. The black lacquered bookcase has chartreuse sliding panels. Large, dramatic designs on the couch upholstery match those in the drapes, which cover the entire outside wall of the living room. A "grill" coffee table, reminiscent of the grills found in sidewalks, is made of natural willow, and serves both the couch and the living room chairs.

Explaining the low cost of the furniture, Warren says, "The Veterans Administration paid $20 for materials to make it, like they do for any veteran taking one of the shop courses." The $13 Warren paid was in excess of the amount paid by the Government.

The energetic, black-haired student will receive his Bachelor's degree in Agriculture next January. Dodie says when they were dating, Warren drew houses on the menus and tablecloths, and at dances, on the programs!

"I did not know anything about architecture, then, but I decided I had to take an interest in it, or quit going with Warren!"

Now she helps him draw plans, and advises him on some of his drawings. "Usually, I tell him to put more cabinet space in the kitchens," laughs Dodie, "and sometimes he does—sometimes he doesn't."

Drawing plans is more than a hobby with Warren, though. He is designing a series of efficiency apartments, some of which are now already under construction in Houston. He is also working as a draftsman with a local firm of architects.

Dodie studies with her husband, and is becoming something of an expert on architecture, too. She likes to work together, and tries to learn from Warren.

After observing Warren mix the chartreuse paint for the bookcase he made, and the fuschia for the buffet, she thought she had caught the idea. One day, while Warren was in class, Dodie mixed several cans of paint together and was rather proud of a lavender shade she had achieved. With this, she painted the bathroom.

When Warren came in from class, all he said was, "OH, NO!"

Music Program Presented At Rotary Lunch

A musical program by music directors from the Bryan public schools was presented at the regular weekly luncheon of the Bryan-College Rotary Club Monday.

W. R. Carmichael, superintendent of Bryan Public School System, was in charge of the program which featured vocal, piano, and horn solos by three musical directors. Miss Jean Clark, in charge of music at Travis Elementary School, played two piano solos. Miss Clark was followed by C. E. McGown Jr., director of the Stephen F. Austin Band. McGown rendered a baritone horn solo.

Several vocal solos were presented by Carl J. Best, director of vocal music at Stephen F. Austin High School. Best was introduced by Carmichael earlier in the program and took charge of the program after that.

Best's first move after being introduced by Carmichael was to call on the superintendent to give a solo. Carmichael responded after considerable persuasion.

Mrs. F. I. Dahlberg, in charge of music at the Crockett Elementary School assisted in the program.
