

Drouth Halts Stock Dealing In Angelo

San Angelo, Tex., Oct. 31—(P)—Most San Angelo-area stockmen who usually fatten cattle through the fall and winter have shut their gates and left their feedlots empty this time.

Noel Conaway explains the plight of those who usually fatten stock on bought feeds.

"We just don't think we can afford it this time. Feed prices are all out of proportion to the price of cattle. So when a man has to buy all his feed, he can't help but lose."

Cottontail hulls, essential in a feedlot here as bread on the stockman's family table, are as hard to get as a good rain. They cost $30 a ton, and it's a lucky man who can find them, even at that.

Crow Packing Co. of Pecos protects itself by carrying on its own feeding operations. The company has about 600 head on feed. It contracted its feed early, at lower prices, and bought many of its feeder cattle earlier, at prices below current market.

Drouth Stops Feed

The drouth has stopped another important phase of feeding in this area. Most years, dozens of stockfarmers here fatten from 10 to 200 cattle apiece on feeds they have grown on their own land. They have no feed this year. Not only are they not fattening cattle, but most of them have even cut down drastically on their milk stock because of the lack of feed.

Outside Falsies New Fashion In Swim Suits

Los Angeles, Oct. 31—(P)—The bathing beauties of 1952 will be out in the open with their deceit, if any.

The major California swim suit makers previewed their new lines before the nation's fashion editors and showed, among other things, suits with outside falsies.

Cole calls them the "flying wing" bras. A wing on the bodice turns down for the flat-chested girl but worn up, eclipses a too-generous bosom.

Another hit of the show opening yesterday was an all-nylon black velvet swim suit by Catalina, complete with a jeweled choker collar. The collar unites and transforms into a belt for those who prefer their bathing suits strapless.

Catalina's people announced without the batting of an eye lash that the suit is made for swimming. It seems the tight fitting nylon resists water while attracting male stares. The suit has a Parisian look and even a Parisian name. It's called the "Eyeful Tower."

Rose Marie Reid featured one job that could well bring the prospectors out of the mountains. It was in gold and silver metallic lace but even the model wasn't sure whether she could get near the water in this one.

Gantner featured the little boy look in its models, even to pockets. The pockets are without flaps.

The Southwestern Indian motif was featured throughout the collection. One maker even includes a strand of Navajo beads with each suit.

The swim suit parade touched off the California fashion creators National Press week—a week-long show of the huge California fashion industry, second only to New York in size.

Club Leaders Reset Course for Nov. 15

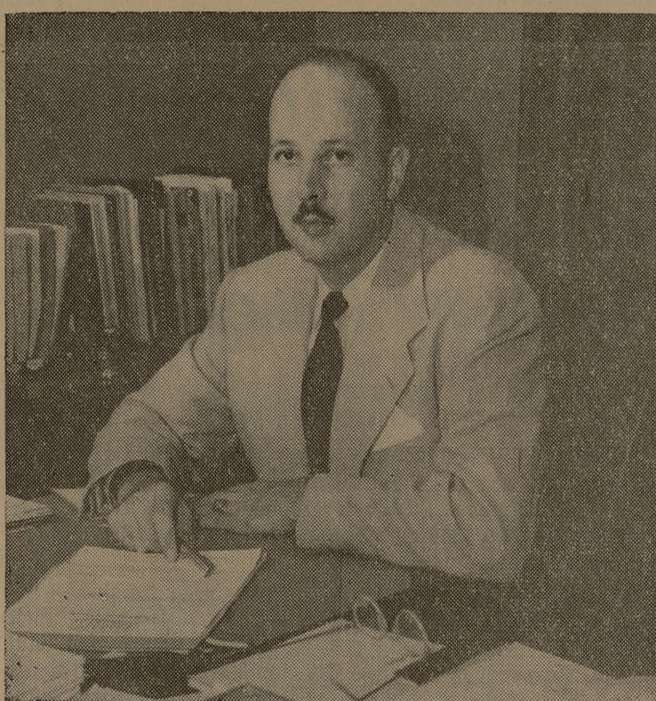

The training course for Cub Scout leaders will be held Nov. 15 instead of Thursday as previously announced, Daniel Russell, chairman of the Boy Scout Training Committee said Tuesday.

The change of plans was made because of a Halloween celebration which made it impossible for some of the Houston den mothers to come to College Station Thursday.

"All mothers of Cub age boys and all others interested in Cubbing are invited to attend. The only charge will be $1.50 for the luncheon," added Russell.

Leading the program will be C. H. Peden and Joe Johnson of the Sam Houston Area Council in Houston.

A&M Moving In Right Direction, Says Chris Gent

Chris Gent

"I wish the Aggies could see what's going on in these other places. In these buildings, students are learning the true art of living—and getting a chance to develop their sociabilities, personalities, and abilities to work with other students."

Chris F. Gent, assistant director and business manager of the Memorial Student Center, made this comment following a trip through student unions at other colleges. Today, he believes, A&M is definitely moving in that direction and at a higher than expected speed.

Although seemingly unfriendly, distinguished looking Gent has been working with the MSC since December, 1947. A member of the Class of '40, he has a degree in business administration.

Gent came to A&M from Moody, (near Temple), and after a year of college went into the army. He was discharged a major and now holds the same rank in the Air Force Medical Corps.

During the opening of the MSC, Gent worked an average of 15 hours a day, but at that time, he says, everyone was working hard.

Now, he believes, the Center is beginning to stand without wobbling and the staff functions with a far more superior system.

His job consists of the running of the gift shop, bowling alley, guest rooms and food department; he also handles the maintenance of administrative records, and hiring and firing of personnel.

Gent is married and has two children—Nancy and Chris. "The only disadvantage," he says, "in being married is that my wife is a TU graduate, her brother and his wife, her mother and father are also graduates of the University which sorta' makes things one sided around Thanksgiving time."

Food Work Fascinating MSC's Tunnell Says

"Working with food is fascinating, and once you get involved in it you never want to quit," believes Teresa Tunnell, food director of the MSC.

At the outbreak of World War II, Miss Tunnell joined the Women's Army Corps, where she received additional training in the preparation of foods as a dietician intern in an army hospital.

After two-and-a-half years of service with the WACs, she took a job in Washington, D. C., as manager of the Department of Labor's cafeteria. Leaving Washington in September, 1948, she came to A&M as assistant food director of the MSC. During this past summer, she advanced to her present position.

When asked about the progress of the MSC's food department, Miss Tunnell said, "We've been moving along rather fast, but we have had many set backs at various times."

Since the three eating places are only open certain hours during the day and the volume of expected business cannot fully be determined, it is hard to know what menus to plan, Miss Tunnell explained.

"Our service has been improved considerably since the first of the year, but we are still new and are growing fast," she said.

Ag Experiment Station Receives Large Grant

A grant of $453,52 has been offered the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station by the El Paso Valley Compress Company, Fabens, to aid research on control of the Verticillium disease of cotton.

Dr. R. D. Lewis, director of the Experiment Station, said the money would be used by the substation at Ysleta.

HT - Barkley Win Seen by Sec. Tobin

New York, Oct. 29—(P)—Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin said last night he believed President Truman and Vice President Alben W. Barkley could "Sweep America" in the next election.

He told a cheering audience of 2,000 that "in my opinion, a ticket made up of President Truman and the Vice President would again sweep America."

Tobin addressed a gathering of the Jewish Labor Committee after Barkley delivered an address.

YMCA Sponsors Morning Social

The YMCA is sponsoring a morning Coffee Hour for the second consecutive year. Both students and professors are invited to meet in the North Solarium of the "Y" Monday through Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 to discuss campus affairs, world affairs, or anything of mutual interest, announced C. L. Ray, president of the YMCA Council.

"We hope the students will get to know their professors out of class as well as in class and that the professors will get to know their students better," said Ray.

Woman Says Husband Overseas by Mistake

Seattle, Oct. 31—(P)—A Seattle mother of four complained to the Post-Intelligencer today that her husband, a survivor of the infamous Bataan death march, had been sent to Korea, "by mistake."

The husband, Cpl. Eugene Sturant Corder, 31, first entered the Army in 1941 prior to Pearl Harbor.

"My husband was held prisoner (by the Japanese) for three years and four months," Mrs. Corder said. "When he finally got back to this country I could hardly recognize him. He weighed only 80 pounds."

"He was wounded and had received the Purple Heart Medal before being taken prisoner. When he was discharged in 1946, he was given 60 per cent disability."

Because he was in the reserves, Corder was called back into the service last November.

He was ordered overseas last February but was hospitalized instead because of his old wounds, Mrs. Corder said.

"I knew it would happen," she added. "He isn't in condition for Army life anymore and never will be. He took too much while he was in the service before."

To Be Discharged

Mrs. Corder said that after several months hospitalization, Corder was told he would be given a medical discharge. Suddenly, she said, he was transferred in September from a hospital in Texas to Fort Lawton here, and 10 days later was on his way to Korea. She said that according to his letters he has already seen front line duty.

"My husband and I have both protested to every official possible," she said. "All we ever get for an answer is that 'there must have been some mistake.'"

Mrs. Corder said that after her husband left for overseas, she applied for a hardship discharge. The request was denied, she said.

NCAA Okays Cotton Bowl Operations

The Cotton Bowl has met all provisions of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, and its plan of operation for 1952 has been approved, Howard Grubbs, secretary of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association said today.

Applications for tickets will be taken between Nov. 1 and Nov. 4.

The NCAA set down a number of rules governing Bowl games. One was that representatives of colleges must be on the governing board. Another was that one-third of the tickets must go to the competing schools.

Grubbs said the Cotton Bowl had for years had 22 of its 28 directors from member schools of the Southwest Conference, so it easily met that provision.

It has always given 30,000 tickets to the competing schools. The Cotton Bowl seats 75,000. So that provision was met.

The Cotton Bowl had been allotting 85 per cent of the net receipts to the competing schools. But to meet the NCAA provision it had to give 75 per cent of the gross, which includes radio, program and other source of revenue. So the Cotton Bowl just changed its procedure to give 75 per cent of the gross instead of 85 per cent
