

Morgan Leads Baptist Revival This Week

The First Baptist Church of College Station is sponsoring a revival each night this week at 7:15.

The nightly gathering is under the direction of the Rev. James N. Morgan, pastor of the North Fort Worth Baptist Church and music is directed by Charles Downey of Huntsville.

"Students attending the revival," said the Rev. James J. McDaniel, interim pastor of the church, "will be released in time to be back in their dorms by 8:30."

Saturday night's program will feature a movie entitled "Mr. Texas." This picture is a biography of the Fort Worth revival led by Billy Graham and stars Graham, Redd Harper and Cindy Walker. Included in the film are scenes of the conversion of a typical cowboy.

"If the demand is great enough, the movie will be shown twice Saturday night," said the Rev. McDaniel.

In Fort Worth, 16,000 people saw it at the premier on Oct. 9 and the requests for a re-run were so numerous that it was shown three times.

Ex-Gestapo Agent Caught After Five Year Search

Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 31—(AP) A former Nazi gestapo (secret police) agent made his mistake of becoming a policeman after successfully hiding his past for five years under a false name.

His mistake cost him a two-year prison sentence today.

Here's how it happened: At war's end, Herbert Balhorn changed his name to Herbert Baumann, because he was hunted for his nazidime crimes.

After a few years, his wife succeeded in having him declared missing and legally dead. He remarried her under his new alias. Then he got a job on the Bremen police force.

But one day his superior assigned him to a routine checkup on the disappearance of Balhorn—his real self.

Suddenly the superior noticed Balhorn's picture in the old files and recognized him.

Balhorn was promptly arrested. A court today convicted him of mistreating eight German concentration camp prisoners while he was serving in the gestapo.

No Divorce, No Money Wails Abdullah King

Houston, Oct. 31—(AP)—Sheppard (Abdullah) King III said tonight there is "too much prejudice against me" in Houston and that he may end up trying to divorce his wife somewhere else.

The wealthy young Texan said he hoped for quick action in order that he might marry Samia Gamal, the Egyptian belly dancer he met, courted and won in three hours time.

A hearing yesterday on his wife's annulment petition ended with no action and the curvaceous Gloria dousing Sheppard with a glass of water.

"I don't know why I came back from Egypt," he said, "I came back to get my money and a divorce and I haven't gotten either."

He said he was considering getting a divorce in Egypt or Mexico. The romance of Sheppard, who has become a Moslem and taken the name Abdullah, and Samia has created international interest. It also has led to some story scenes and revelations.

Claims Intoxication

One was Gloria's claim she did not remember her remarriage to Sheppard last June. In her annulment petition she said she had consumed "too many fancy drinks" and didn't remember the ceremony.

The hearing on the annulment was postponed until Dec. 10. This was because Houston attorney Robert L. Sonfield, who had filed a "friend of the court" intervention petition, insisted on Dallas District Judge Robert A. Hall appearing as a witness.

Hall remarried the couple. Sonfield's petition asking the annulment be denied said the annulment petition mocked the integrity of Texas courts and judges, particularly Hall. He said Hall would not have performed the ceremony if Gloria had been intoxicated.

Attorneys for Gloria said Hall did not know she was intoxicated and had no way of knowing it from her actions.

Egyptian Divorce?

Sheppard said he had asked his attorney in Egypt if a divorce there would be recognized in the United States. If it would be, King said he would fly to Egypt and obtain one.

"If it isn't," he said, "I might end up in Mexico, and I might do it anyway. The fishbills on this Cadillac might be passing that way any day now."

King said he didn't think he would get a "fair hearing" in any divorce suit in Harris county.

"There's too much prejudice against me," he said, adding "you know, everybody can take a poke at me, but I can't say anything back."

He said he had a cable from Samia today, but wouldn't reveal its contents. He had cabled her yesterday to let her know how the annulment petition hearing ended.

Denies Disinheritance

He denied that he had moved from his mother's house, and said she wasn't going to disinherit him. The socially prominent mother, Mrs. Bonner King, had threatened this shortly after the news of his romance became of global interest.

King said that "there might be shooting going on in Egypt now but I'd be more peaceful there."

He added he just might fly to Cairo and today, Samia said "I'll wait for Ugly (her pet name for him) no matter how long. I love him."

She also said she had virtually accepted an offer to appear in a Miami, Fla., show in January.

Young Aeronautical Head Works on Air Development

Only 38 years old and with an extensive background in air frame design and research, Professor Edward E. Brush, head of the aeronautical engineering department, has a great enthusiasm for A&M's role in recent aeronautical developments.

Besides cooperative work with agriculturalists, such as A&M's much publicized crop-dusting airplanes, Brush said his department is now doing research on new materials for air frame construction.

"This year we are beginning research on a metal, titanium, which is newly adopted in the airplane industry," Brush said.

Another research is being made on an extremely strong structure called "sandwich construction" which consists of two sheets of metal bonded to a core of low density plastic, he explained. This laminated construction, by separating the metal, gives unusual strength and stiffness, he added.

A supersonic wind tunnel is now in the designing stage, which will be constructed in connection with the new engineering building, according to Brush.

Since the department was established in 1940, aircraft principles and design have changed at such a rapid pace there has been no chance for the curricula to become stale. Brush believes his major problem has been that of converting the curricula to the principles of jet engines and supersonic speed.

"In the future we will be faced with more changes in order to cope with atomic powered planes, and few of our graduates will deal with the old type piston engine craft since the majority of them go directly into industry or the air force," Brush said.

Although born into a family of physicians, Brush said he was inspired at an early age to study the field of aeronautics. His first job was with the Curtis Aircraft Company where he did part of the stress analysis on the first P-40 fighter plane. Later he went to Lockheed as a senior engineer and worked on the first Constellation and P-38 fighter.

During World War II he designed military aircraft for the Fleetwing division of Kaiser Cargo in Bristol, Conn. He also devoted a portion of his war time activities to experimental work on the first guided missiles.

A native of Nebraska, Brush received his BS degree from New York University. He also did four years part time graduate work on his PhD at the University of Minnesota.

For the past four years he has served in his present position at A&M. He said his observation of A&M students has been that they are more clean-cut and more conscientious than many students he has worked with at other colleges.

Elves, Goblins Prepare To March Forth Tonight

By ROBERT FARRINGTON

New York, Oct. 31—(AP)—This is the night that elves and goblins (junior grade, that is) are abroad in the land.

A handful of candy, paid in tribute to the masked small fry of the neighborhood, will save you from the fearful deprivations of "trick or treat" night.

Failure to come across may result in soap smears on your screen door, front step or car windows. The Halloween goblins of 1951 hang few fence gates on church steeples as their fathers did in an earlier, simpler era.

To cut down on the Halloween urge to smear, break, overturn and confuse things in general, many communities stage ragamuffin parades, parties and dances.

On the theory that if you know where they are, you know where they ain't, teenagers are lured to these affairs and even encouraged to soap store windows (with merchants' permission). They are given prizes for the best hobboblin design.

Four New Schools Scheduled by ORC

During the next few weeks four more Army Organized Reserve Corps schools are scheduled for opening in Texas, according to Colonel C. M. Culp, Chief of the Texas Military District. Two schools have been in operation since January at Houston and Dallas.

The new schools will be at Beaumont, Fort Worth, Austin and Waco, with Austin being the first of the four actually scheduled classes.

The ORC school program, inaugurated in Texas with the opening of the Dallas and Houston Schools, provides instruction for reservists who are not members of organized units but who desire to receive training in their specific branch of service. The schools are administered and all classes conducted by qualified reserve officers under the general direction and guidance of the local Army Organized Reserve Instructor.

Teaching staffs of the schools are selected from among the best qualified reserve officers who are given additional special training by their branch service schools prior to taking up their teaching duties.

The ORC school program is of especial interest to members of the Volunteer Reserve as only those Volunteer Reservists who are assigned to school detachments are authorized active duty training during the coming year.

Also, attendance at the school enables reservists to earn points necessary for retention in the active reserve, credit toward promotion and reserve duty points required for the satisfactory year for retirement purposes.

The number of courses offered at the schools will be determined by the interest shown by the local reservists. Each class is required to have a minimum of ten officers in attendance. Failure to maintain required attendance will result in discontinuance of the course.

Classroom training will be accomplished during training assemblies held two evenings per month. In addition weekend and 15-day summer field training will be carried on within budgetary limitations.
