

Negotiators Reject Commie Proposal

Munsan, Korea, Nov. 8.—(AP)—United Nations truce negotiators today "completely rejected" the Communists' newest proposal for a Korean buffer zone.

The final showdown came at the end of a four hour and 35 minute session in Panmunjom. Most of it was spent finding out just what the Red plan meant.

U.N. negotiators said it could create a de facto cease-fire in Korea, freeing the Reds from settling other armistice questions.

"We completely rejected the proposal," said Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodges, chairman of the U.N. armistice subcommittee.

Another session—the subcommittee's 16th at Panmunjom—was set for 11 a.m. Friday (9 P.M. Thursday, EST).

Allied negotiators again asked the Reds to accept a plan the U.N. advanced Monday. This would postpone final settlement of the buffer zone until all other armistice questions are decided.

Prisoners

The U.N. command has indicated it is particularly anxious to settle the question of prisoners of war. This is item four on the agenda. The buffer zone is number two, and the only armistice clause discussed in negotiations which first opened July 10.

Hodges said the U.N. command was afraid the Communist proposal would finalize a buffer zone right now. That could halt the shooting without signing a formal armistice.

"We spent a great deal of time today at a map," Hodges said, "trying to determine what the Reds meant by 'adjustments.'" As you know, (under the Communist proposal) one side has complete veto over adjustments.

"We found in general that where they are willing to make an adjustment they want it done at a reduced rate on our part. They want it at a dollar trade for 50 cents."

Allied Offer

The Allies have offered to give up some 200 square miles of territory they hold in the mountainous East in exchange for 200 square miles in the West which the Reds hold. This includes Kaesong, former truce site just south of the 38th parallel. The Reds propose taking the 200 miles in the East but won't give up the area in the West.

"We restated our proposal of Nov. 5," Hodges said. "This in effect says that we settle on the principle of basing the military line of demarcation on the line of contact as it exists at about the time an armistice is agreed upon."

"If this principle is accepted, it would save a great deal of time because all of the details of a changing line of contact could be settled at one time, concurrently with other items of the agenda."

Under the Allied proposal, the full five-man negotiating committees would proceed with the rest of the agenda while a specially created committee of staff officers worked on the buffer zone.

Rep Proposal

The Red proposal is similar in this respect except for two vital points:

(1) the present subcommittee would first agree "in general" on the location of the buffer zone and (2) either side would subsequently have the right only to "propose" changes in its location if the battle line were substantially altered. Either side could refuse to accept these proposed changes.

The Allies say agreement to the Red position might create a de facto cease fire and they might never settle the three other armistice questions—supervision of the truce, exchange of prisoners, and recommendations to the governments on eventual withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea.

Mrs. Ashton Gives Report About Europe

Members of the Campus Study Club heard a report on present living conditions of European women by Mrs. John Ashton at a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

"Every day living is the biggest problem for women of England, France, and Italy," Mrs. Ashton reported. The speaker formed this opinion when she made a tour of Europe last summer.

The campus traveler told her audience that parties and club meetings have largely been discontinued on the continent since the war, since the top problem is getting enough food.

"Italian workers are faced with unemployment but do not want charity," continued Mrs. Ashton, "only a chance to work." They think the United States is their friend, and is trying to help them," she concluded.

Speaker of the afternoon was introduced by Mrs. D. L. Belcher, program chairman.

Two life members of the Campus Study Club, Mrs. F. B. Clark and Mrs. G. S. Graps, were presented by Mrs. G. E. Madeley and Mrs. R. E. Patterson, respectively.

During the business session, the club voted to sponsor a Woman's Exchange. Mrs. W. T. Matzen, chairman of the project committee, outlined plans for the exchange.

More OCS Officers Needed for Service

The Army has decided to double its Officer Candidate program to produce 16,000 second lieutenants a year instead of 8,000. The current requirement for young officers and doubling the goal is due to the separation of thousands of Reserve officers who were ordered to active duty since the Korean situation developed. Col. C. M. Culp, Chief of the Texas Military District, said today.

In implementing the program a new Officer Candidate School has been ordered for the Guided Missiles Center at Fort Bliss, Tex. It is anticipated the new school will be ready to accept candidate officers for anti-aircraft by Nov. 15.

It was thought earlier in this year that the activation of three new schools, graduating 8,000, would be sufficient, but separations of Reserves has brought about the change in plans and production of officers. At the present time OCS classes are conducted at the Engineering School, Fort Belvoir, Va.; Signal School, Fort Monmouth, N. J.; the Armored School, Fort Knox, Ky.; the three latest to be activated.

Other OCS classes are held at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.; Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.; and the Army General School, Fort Riley, Kan. Prior to the outbreak of the Korean conflict, there was only one school at Fort Riley, Kan.

When the Fort Bliss school is opened that will make two OCS establishments in the Fourth Army area.
