Five Student Publications Cover Academic Interests

By HARRI BAKER
Battalion Staff Writer

A publication for every taste is the motto of Student Publications. An annual, four magazines, and a daily newspaper are put out by the students of A&M for the students of A&M.

Roland Bing is director of Student Publications. He acts as advisor to the editors of the various magazines, who are elected by the councils of their respective schools.

The "Aggieland" is the record of the year's activities at A&M. So it can include everything that happens during the year, right up to the end, the "Aggieland" does not come out until the fall following the year it covers. The "Aggieland 51" will probably be ready sometime after Thanksgiving.

The magazine for the School of Arts and Sciences is the "Commentator." Published five times a year, it contains a little bit of everything—fiction, poems, short stories, non-fiction and the ever-present jokes. Jack Brandt and Dale Walston are co-editors.

The School of Agriculture's magazine is the "Agriculturist." It features technical and constructive articles about new developments in agriculture, and articles of general interest to anyone who will make his living from the soil. James Leeman is editor, and it is published five times a year, starting in September.

The "Engineer" is also a technical magazine. It comes out eight times a year with articles about machinery, metals, techniques, and all the other things that interest engineering majors. Its editor is Bob Brown.

The "Southwestern Veterinarian" is the only magazine on the campus that has a larger non-student circulation than student. Practicing veterinarians all over the world receive this magazine. It comes out four times a year, in October, December, February, and April. Bill Ellsworth is editor.

The official daily newspaper of Texas A&M College and College Station, "The Battalion," completes the list. The "Batt" comes out daily, Monday through Friday. Besides complete coverage of A&M

George B. Wilcox Has Devoted Life To Aiding Education Evolution Process

George B. Wilcox is a man who believes that education is an evolutionary process. And he has devoted his life to aiding the evolution of education much as the geneticist aids the development of plants and animals.

As head of the Education and Psychology Department, Wilcox has had a hand in training many young men who have become teachers in the state's public school system. But his contribution to education has gone farther than that.

Reared on a Grimes county farm, he attended rural schools and graduated from high school at Iola. After graduating from Sam Houston State Teachers College, Huntsville, he served as principal of high schools at Groesbeck and Wharton and superintendent at Plantersville and Cleveland, before World War I interrupted his career. Even the army chose to utilize his teaching ability rather than giving him his choice of overseas service.

In the early part of his career, Wilcox fluctuated between teaching and railway accounting. He returned to the latter at the war's end, but soon joined the Agricultural Extension Service as an emergency demonstration agent in Limestone county.

Then, after serving for a time as principal and vocational agriculture teacher at Jacksboro high school, he was one of the organizers of A&M Consolidated High School in 1920 and divided his time between the college and the high school, which he served as principal. He later served as superintendent of Consolidated before becoming a full-time employee of the college in 1925.

Degree From A&M
Wilcox received a bachelor's degree from A&M in 1923 and studied in the summers to obtain a master's degree at Columbia University. He also has completed course work for a Ph. D. degree at Texas University.

He received wide support for the post of Texas education commissioner, and even his statement that a younger man, who had been more recently connected with public schools, should be the choice did not deter his supporters.

Aside from having taught in Texas 35 years, Wilcox has served as a leader in many educational organizations. He has been vice president and president of the Texas State Teachers Association and a member of the Rural Education Committee and the Advisory Committee on Public School Finance of the National Education Association. He served six years as a member of the State Board for Teacher Retirement and is a charter member of the Texas School of the Air Board of Directors and the Texas Council for Teacher Education.

A charter member of the College Station city commission, Wilcox served eight years on the commission before retiring voluntarily.

Authored Articles
He is author of a number of articles, which have appeared in school magazines, and of a civics textbook, "In a Democracy," approved in Texas in 1941 and in New Mexico a year later.

Widely known among school administrators, he is secretary of the Texas School Administration Conference which meets at A&M every summer.

According to Wilcox, teaching is more than a matter of text. It is the teacher's job, he says, to give his students the keen understanding and alertness necessary for wholesome living.

He endeavors to give his students, who will become teachers, a sympathetic point of view, which they may pass along to their own students.

The graduate program in the A&M Education and Psychology Department is aimed at helping teachers keep abreast of developments in their field and at promoting better school administration.

Education is an evolutionary process, Wilcox says; there is no way to go but forward.

Murals

the contest and the game continued in its usual state. Sheppard hit a free shot for the losers and the athletes took over.

Dishman hit a set shot and Douglas made two free tosses. Again the corner beckoned to Mal and he split the nets for two more counters. Score: 28-8.

Hudspeth hit on a set shot and Douglas hit a set shot to keep the score a 30-10. Charlie Smith took over Douglas' stock in trade, the corner, and hit for two as the third quarter ended. Score: 30-12.

Fourth Quarter
In the final quarter the roof caved in for the infantrymen although they did tally more than a third of their total points. Douglas hit on a set shot. Sandlin put a crisp shot through the net and the score read 34-12.

Smith again came to the fore and deposited a crisp shot to rack up two more infantry tallies.

From this point on the game went all to the Athletes as the final tally read 40-19.
