then? Some of the non-reg students are not speaking back when we speak to them.

• When is the freshman class going to elect officers?

Most of the freshmen agreed that many of their problems within their area could be worked out if they had an organization of some kind.

Explains Purpose

In opening the meeting, Joe Wallace, Corps Staff junior from San Antonio, said its purpose was to bring up any problems any class had concerning the corps. "These meetings are to help the various classes, and if any class needs help, it's the freshmen who are new at A&M," Wallace said.

Colonel of the Corps Eric Carlson explained the position of the cadets. "We're trying to make a better corps, to make better leaders," he said. "To do this, we need the cooperation of everybody. We're all on the same team, and we want the corps to be as solid as a rock."

Commandant Col. Joe E. Davis said, "Every cadet has certain obligations. Unless these obligations are accepted, we can't have the military school we desire."

Col. Shelley Meyers, PMS&T, explained contract procedures and answered questions. Col. E. W. Napier, PAS&T, was also on hand to answer questions.

Queries brought up at the meeting will be referred to the proper authorities and will be answered at the next meeting, which will be in about one month, the Fish were told.

participants. "Judge Streit called attention to the number of athletic scholarships offered at several Southwest Conference schools. At the A&M College of Texas we have almost twice as many scholarships held by students who have no connection with any athletic team as scholarships held by boys participating in all athletic sports."

And in Chicago, Hugh Willett, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said a substantial majority of the organization's 320 members supported a 12-point program for tighter controls on college athletics.

But a committee of seven college presidents, meeting in Washington, agreed "something must be done" to remove whatever evils are in the intercollegiate athletic program.

University of Oklahoma athletes are required to maintain proper scholastic standards, University President Dr. George L. Cross said in answering Judge Streit's statement that one Oklahoma football player was taking introduction to geography and loaded his program with theories of basketball, swimming games and volleyball in his senior year.

"We are interested in having all our athletes make steady progress toward graduation," Dr. Cross said.

The reaction of Bud Wilkinson, Oklahoma football coach, was to go into the records and announce that football lettermen have been graduated at a 92 per cent pace since he became coach of the Sooners.

"If Judge Streit will give us the name of the Oklahoma football player he was referring to, we will be glad to make the player's scholastic record public." The judge did not name the player in his lengthy statement.

The judge's statement that Southern Methodist awards 154 athletic scholarships annually brought from Athletic Director Matty Bell a question as to what was wrong with his school granting such scholarships.

"Well, it isn't any of the judge's business in the first place and in the second place these scholarships cover all sports, not just football. . . . These are given to boys, who, in the main, would be unable to attend college without the assistance. . . . I wish this judge would meet some of the fine boys we have in athletics. Our athletes are among the finest young men in the country and it is that way at most of the colleges."

Dana X. Bible, University of Texas Athletic Director, conceded the collegiate football program "may have gotten off-side a little bit" sometimes but declared the good in football far out-weighs the bad.

"It's just another indication of the need for a committee like this," said Dr. John A. Hannah, President of Michigan State and head of a special committee set up by the American Council on Education to look into sports.

That was the only comment on the judge's blast from the committee of seven college presidents but before the jurist made his statement, Hannah told reporters: "We realize we must be responsible for the total operation of the university. We have a real concern in the protection of the integrity in higher education."

"We start with the assumption that there is much good in college sports. We want to preserve what's good and take the evil out."

Tennessee's Rebuttal

Tennessee's rebuttal came from President C. E. Brehm who said in a statement:

"We don't think the athletic department has over-emphasized athletic activities to the detriment of our academic program. We are maintaining high academic standards and the boys who play on the football team have to conform to those standards if they continue in school."

Maryland's answer to Judge Streit's statement that 60 of Maryland's 97 players are from other states was given by Geary Eppley, Dean of Men and Chairman of the Athletic Council.

"We have always had quite a few from out of the state," he said. "Probably not so many as we now have but the bulk of our students from outside of Maryland and the District of Columbia come from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York."

Beaumont-Port Arthur Clubs Invite Wives

The Beaumont-Port Arthur home-town clubs will put into effect a new means of boosting attendance at bi-weekly meetings tonight, by inviting wives of married students to attend their meeting.

In addition to discussing plans for a joint Christmas Dance at the Port Arthur Pleasure Pier, the club will view the showing of A&M's football game with Georgia in the Presidential Cup Bowl last year. Aggie quarterback Dick Gardemal will describe the film.

Also included on the big program will be Cowboy songs by H. L. "Hank" McAdams and refreshments consisting of coffee and doughnuts.

Dr. R. D. Turk, head of the Veterinary Parasitology Department, was guest speaker at the College Station Lions Club Monday in the MSC.

Dr. Turk delivered an amusing talk on the part parasites play in the life of both man and animal. President Al Price announced an election for Nov. 26 to fill vacancies in three offices of the club.

The offices and nominees are as follows: board of directors (term of 1951-53), A. H. Krezdorn, H. T. Blackhurst, and W. H. LeRoy; third vice-president, A. B. Medlin and Jack Steel; assistant Lion Tamer, T. S. "Tom" Stephens.

site, with patrols stationed at all entrances and key points on the campus.

Members of the Signal Corps will be assigned the responsibility of providing communications systems for the guard duty, Jobe said. The system will include field telephones between the bonfire and Dormitory guard room, plus several "Walkie-talkies" at campus entrances.

Buses for student transportation to cutting areas will be running regularly during afternoons of actual construction on the bonfire. The three college buses will leave from the drill field-MSC area as soon as they are filled, returning to the campus for new loads after each trip.

Need Trucks

Ted Stephens, chairman of the transportation committee, asked all students and residents of Bryan and College Station to contact him if they know of any trucks or pick-ups available to haul wood onto the campus. He said there is still a big shortage of trucks.

Jobe urged all student to take part in the bonfire building. Said the head yell leader, "Since the bonfire belongs to the 12th Man, I think it only right that everyman do his share of work on it. This includes going to watch your team play intramurals. There's no reason for any student to miss working with that excuse—unless he is actually taking part in the game."

J. C. Fletcher, chairman of the Supply Room, said all saws and axes must be checked into the Dorm 12 Gun Room each night after working areas. He said this rule must be followed.

Contains Historical Facts

(Continued from Page 1) ry says, but simply an attempt to set down an average Texan's reactions to A&M, its people, its own individual ways, and its amazing growth.

"The Story of Texas A&M" is a narration of the first 75 years of the A&M College of Texas. In a description of student life and the campus itself, Perry tries to answer questions that a boy planning to come to A&M would ask.

Beginning the book with a description of the inauguration of President M. T. Harrington last year, Perry continues the story with a second chapter entitled, "Some Aggies I Have Known." Also in the biography, the author deals with the differences in student life at A&M with that of other schools. He continues with chapters on traditions, military, student publications, the Aggie Band and other musical organizations.

Separate chapters of the book are devoted to a description of each of the college's schools. In the final chapters, Perry takes a look at the future A&M, with the far-reaching plans of the college discussed in detail.
