Texas' Coach Ed Price Says He's No Kyle Field Stranger

When Edwin Price visits Kyle Field today, he will be here in a new role but not as a stranger. In fact, the 22nd head football professor of the University of Texas is an authority on the traditions and folkways of Aggieland.

Nor does Price need any instructions as to the "Spirit of Aggieland." He was one of a band of favored Longhorns who were trounced, 6-7, in 1931 by Frenchy Domingue and his inspired playmates.

There must have been times when Price wondered if it was worthwhile. He was placed at a minor position, freshman coach, and it wasn't until some time after he returned from a three-year Navy hitch, most of it spent on a carrier in the Pacific, that the long-awaited opportunity beckoned.

There is no doubt that the memory of that afternoon will be lurking in the Kyle Field shadows today, although Price has had several more pleasant visits since as an assistant coach.

15 Years On Campus

Price spent 15 years around the University campus working for the other fellow. In fact it was three other fellows. They were Jack Chevigny, Dana Bible, and Blair Cherry.

At last, late in 1950, the big break came. Cherry decided to trade in his ulcers for oil wells, and the head coaching job was wide open.

Ed Price

For a quiet man, Price has made an amazing number of friends over the state. These friends might have questioned Price's judgment in wanting the job, but they were for him. Price was elected virtually by popular demand—at least by popular acquiescence.

Price has long been a coach of coaches. Not physically equipped as a player to overpower the opposition, he has always had to use his head and resort to tactics.

This habit persisted, happily, when he turned to coaching. He became a genuine student of three major sports.

As Head Coach

As head coach, Price has gone about his work exactly as his backers knew he would. He has planned everything carefully, has conducted good organization, and has demanded thoroughness and details in carrying out ideas on the gridiron.

His first sign of his thoroughness and good planning was his selection of assistants. Cherry left him J. T. King, Eck Curtis, Bully Gilstrap, and Buddy Jungmichel.

To round out the staff, Price wanted two Texas Exes. He wound up getting Bill Dubose and G. C. (Ox) Emerson. (Dubose came to him from Aggieland.)

Having selected helpers in whom he had confidence, Price delegated responsibilities to each. This was no idle gesture.

One of his beliefs is that no man can run a team in modern football. He puts each day's program on a blackboard, and these schedules and assignments are rigidly followed.

Irvin Explains Distribution Of Football Ducats

Procedure for the allotment of football tickets to home games was discussed by Barlow Irvin, athletic director at A&M, Monday night at a meeting of the Brazos County A&M Club.

One-half of the seats in Kyle Field are distributed to schools A&M plays, Barlow explained. He pointed out many times the school did not sell all the allotted tickets and returned them only a few days before the game.

Barlow stressed that 10 percent of the seats in Kyle Field, which seats 40,000, go to such groups as the Texas Legislature, the press, and the athletic office.

Distribution of tickets to such groups as the Aggie-exes, T-card holders, and faculty members is as fair and equitable as can be devised, Barlow asserted. He said he was open to suggestions for improvement at any time. The sections for these groups are determined in a drawing.
