Murals

After a sluggish start in the second half the QMC pulled themselves together long enough to tally again as June Clark tossed an 18 yard touchdown aerial to Harvey Helms. Yeager circled end for the extra point and the QMC had the game in the bag, 13-7.

A INF Wins Again

After a slow and scoreless first half the battling intramural flag-holders from A Infantry turned lose all their fury to stop B Engineers, 13-0.

Midway in the second period after several broken drives the Infantrymen broke the double stripe as Don Morris tossed to Hud Hudspeth in the Engineers' end zone. The conversion was blocked and the infantrymen assumed the 6-0 lead.

With only four plays remaining in the game the Infantry squad drove to the Engineer two where three line plunges netted the final TD. Ellsworth Clinger split the uprights with a perfect conversion and the Infantry moved into the semi-final round of play.

Tuffy Chandler, Don Morris and Hud Hudspeth played outstanding games.

Company 14 Wins 12-0

Company 14 racked up the Freshman football crown yesterday afternoon by racking up a 12-0 win over their finalists opponent Company 11.

The winners were in complete domination of the game all afternoon and never was Company 11 in the running.

The Ag Engineers walloped the Houston Club to gain the finals of the Club Football circuit. The final score—19-0.

Horseshoes

Army Private Kills 16 Reds in 2 Tries

With U. S. Second Division, Korea, Jan. 15—(Delayed)—AP—An Army private with revenge in his heart stormed Communist lines alone and killed 16 Reds.

For his courage, Pfc. Ronald E. Rosser, 24, Crookstown, Ohio, has been recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The one-man fighting machine explained his act:

"My brother was killed with the First Cavalry Division last February."

Kills 16 in Two Tries

He killed the 16 Reds in two charges, one from a "pinned-down" position virtually at the mercy of the Communists. He hurled grenades with one hand and fired his carbine at automatic with the other.

Rosser, a radio operator for a heavy mortar company, was serving as forward observer on a patrol with a platoon from Company L of the 28th Infantry Regiment. The patrol was caught in heavy enemy crossfire while probing Chinese positions.

Suddenly Rosser dropped his radio and charged up the hill. He ignored mortar fire and Red small arms fire. Puffs of dust kicked up all around him.

Nothing Like It

"I never saw anything like it," said Cpl. Martin J. Scott of Inglewood, Calif. "He was running around throwing grenades with his left hand and firing his carbine with his right."

Rosser reached the first Chinese bunker and silenced it quickly. Racing toward the hill crest he found himself straddling a trench, caught between two enemy soldiers.

He cut down the first one, spun around and shot the other in the chest. Then he moved along the ditch with his carbine on automatic. He killed eight more Chinese and dashed to another bunker.

Rosser tossed in a white phosphorus grenade and waited. An enemy soldier appeared and Rosser shot him between the eyes. He went to two more bunkers and repeated his performance.

When he ran out of ammunition he returned to his patrol's position. "He looked satisfied, as if he had accounted for something," said Cpl. Stan J. Kalas of Chicago. To Sgt. Tony B. Dalba of New York City Rosser shouted, "I got me an even dozen."

Then he went up the hill again, loaded with grenades and ammunition. Later he helped two wounded infantrymen back, and reported he had killed four more Communists. The wounded doughboys were witnesses.

Cpl. Jack D. Watson of New Albany, Ind., said:

"It was better than any picture show I ever saw."
