

Morning Review For Pace

A&M's Corps of Cadets will be reviewed at 7:45 Thursday morning, March 27 by Frank Pace, secretary of the Army, Col. Shelly P. Meyers, PMS&T announced this morning.

Secretary Pace will arrive here Wednesday, March 26, at 6:30 p. m. on a four engine Constellation. The plane will land at Bryan Air Force Base. He plans to leave at 12:30 p. m. Thursday, the PMS&T added.

"He is coming to Texas to inspect A&M," Col Meyers added. "We don't know where he's coming from or where he is going after he leaves."

President of the College M. T. Harrington said, "Secretary Pace said he has always wanted to visit A&M. His inspection of the campus will be Thursday morning from 8 to 11."

Meeting Secretary Pace at the airport on his arrival will be military and college officials. From the airport the Secretary of the Army will be taken to the MSC where he will stay overnight. A special dinner is also planned for Wednesday.

Accompanying the Secretary will be Fred Korth, deputy counselor for the Department of the Army, and two military aides, Lt. Col. John R. Dean, Jr., and Walter Byrde.

Library For Consolidated Sloop Committee Decides

By unanimous decision of the Cornelia Brown Sloop Memorial Committee, a library will be established for the A&M Consolidated Elementary School.

First Polio Case Reported in Area

The first case of polio in the Bryan-College Station area in 1952 was reported in Bryan last week, when two-year-old Jesse Garza, son of Lucio Garza of Walnut Street came down with the disease, the Bryan-Brazos County Health Unit said.

The boy was sent to Breckinridge Hospital in Austin, for treatment.

Influenza again was the leading disease in the College Station vicinity 22 cases were reported in Bryan and 16 here. In second place was septic sore throat with 17 cases in Bryan and 12 in College Station.

A total of 16 cases of diarrhea put that disease in third place in the weekly survey conducted by the health unit.

By unanimous decision of the Cornelia Brown Sloop Memorial Committee, a library will be established for the A&M Consolidated Elementary School. The library, to be named in memory of Mrs. Sloop, will be located in the elementary school area at the discretion of the school board. Approximately $400 in contributions from friends and students of the former teacher will begin the project.

A proposal was made that a showcase containing some of Mrs. Sloop's original manuscripts be located in the library. During her life, Mrs. Sloop wrote several books on elementary education. Her famous "Sloop Method of Reading" has become the standard in many schools for teaching beginners to read.

Fred Sloop, consented to the plan of displaying the manuscripts and, in the name of his family has donated $75 for the library fund.

Mrs. L. P. Gabbard, committee member, was directed to obtain children's books from local families whose children have outgrown them.

J. A. Bonnen will direct a mail campaign to former students of the school who have left the com-

Lange to Speak At YMCA March 25

Dr. Lawrence W. Lange, missionary personnel secretary for the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church USA and representative of the Student Volunteer Movement, will speak at the YMCA on March 25.

Dr. Lange is recruiting missionary workers from colleges and universities throughout the nation on an inter-denominational basis. He will be sponsored by the Student Inter-Faith Council.

"All persons interested in church work are invited to attend," said John Olson, president of the Council. "Those persons who signed dedication cards at the recent Religious Emphasis Week services are especially asked to come," he added.

Second Shipment Of Annuals Due

Students have picked up all but 806 of the 2,226 Aggieland '51's which are being distributed in Goodwin Hall.

Next shipment will arrive either Friday or Monday, announced Roland Bing, manager of Student Publications.

All Aggieland '51 yearbooks will be mailed out in the next two weeks to those ex-students who left their addresses, he added.

'That Band Again'

Jurgens Orchestra to Play For Military Ball, Concert

By HARRI BAKER
Battalion Staff Writer

Dick Jurgens and his orchestra, of "Here's that band again" fame, will give a concert in Guion Hall Saturday night, prior to the Military Ball.

Tickets for the concert, which will begin at 7:15 p. m. are 70 cents. The hour-and-a-half concert will be over at 8:30. From there, the band will go to Sbis Hall to play for the Military Ball from 9 to 12.

Band leader-composer Jurgens and his orchestra have given the nation such hit tunes as "One Dozen Roses," "Cecelia," "Elmer's Tune," "Careless," and others.

The 16-piece Jurgens ensemble features a smooth dance tempo, full arrangements precise playing, and excellent vocals.

Al Galente does double duty as vocalist and violinist for the orchestra. Ray McIntosh also does vocals. The manager of the orchestra is Will Jurgens, brother of the leader. Together they make a rarity in the entertainment business—a successful brother team.

Billboard magazine called the band "a well-knit, well-rehearsed, fully schooled, competent musical organization." Variety magazine said they are "a good musical band with a personality, from the smart appearance they make to the usually imaginative, sometimes downright screwy arrangements they employ."

Football Star
Jurgens, who was born in Sacramento, Calif., attended Sacramento Junior College, where he majored in music and was a star on the football team.

For his term paper in a music course, he wrote a song, "Day Dreams Come at Night," which was later to become his theme song.

The Jurgens orchestra started when he was kicked out of his high school band for playing jazz music. Immediately, he formed his own 9-man aggregation and began playing at summer resorts.

When offered an engagement at a hotel if he could enlarge his organization, he expanded to 14 pieces, auditioning the new men and teaching them 200 arrangements within two weeks.

Radio, Record Hit
From this beginning, the band went on to become a hit on records and radio, and at dance engagements.

During World War II, Jurgens served in the Marine Corps. For the first two years of his enlistment, he was a radio technician, putting to use a knowledge of electricity that was a result of his long-standing hobby, radio engineering. He was then put in charge of the only entertainment unit the Marine had, touring the South Pacific.

After the war, Jurgens reformed his band and continued on his trail to success.

After the two weeks training, he will go to Lake Michigan for two weeks of leadership training.

Juniors who wish to be considered for the awards should call the office of Professor Barger, Room 401, Agriculture Building. Freshmen should contact Dr. Roberts Jacobs, Basic Division, for further information and application, said Dean Shepardson.

Write-In Campaign
A write-in campaign for Eisenhower began only last Friday, following a state attorney general's ruling that such votes should be counted.

The ruling turned an otherwise dull primary into a popularity contest for the nation's presidential timber.

Humphrey filed in the primary at the request of state and national Democratic leaders. The filing had the approval of President Truman. Humphrey has said he would turn over his delegation to Mr. Truman if the President decides to run again.

Tuesday's primary was to pick 25 of the state's Republican delegates to the national convention and 23 of 26 Democratic delegates. Three more delegates for each party will be picked at state conventions.

All delegates are pledged to support their candidate until released by him or until his convention vote drops below ten per cent.

Date Rooms at Housing Office

Students in need of housing for their dates to the Military Ball Saturday, should check by the Housing Office in Goodwin Hall for information as to which Bryan and College residents have rooms for weekend rent in their homes.

Housing Office employees said they did not know how many of the 339 residents listed have already been spoken for, but students have been coming in at regular intervals to obtain information on available accommodations.

The majority of the private homes which have rooms for rent are in Bryan and College Hills. Each home has space for two or more persons.

Complete information on the available rooms, including name, address, and phone number of the residents, can be found on the Housing Office card file.
