Ike Says 'No' About Bad Word

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—If Dwight D. Eisenhower cussed during his radio speech Tuesday night, he doesn't remember it. But if he did swear, he's sorry he did it. The bad word: "Damn."

Eisenhower, here on what literally was a flying visit, told Republican workers he didn't have the slightest memory of having used the word during his Indianapolis speech.

But, he said, "I herewith want to apologize to anyone I may have offended."

The whole thing came up because of an out-of-the-manuscript comment made during his talk.

Eisenhower was having trouble with his mechanical prompter, that gadget on which a speech is printed and from which a speaker reads as it slowly revolves like an old player piano roll. The prompter wasn't keeping up with Eisenhower.

During a round of applause, the radio audience—but not those in the hall—heard something that sounded like "damn it!"

Reporters in the hall, who didn't hear the comment, listened to a play-back of a tape recording of the speech. They heard:

"Go ahead. . . Go ahead. . . Yah, damn it, I want to move up."

But Eugene C. Pulliam, publisher of the Indianapolis Star and the Indianapolis News and an active Eisenhower supporter, was sitting close to the general. Pulliam said a radio technician, not Eisenhower, did the cussing.

BAFB Cadets Get Wings Saturday

Col. Meyer flew 200 sorties during World War II and 31 in Korea from November, 1950 until June, 1951.

A review of the Aviation Cadet unit at the base will take place at 9 a.m. Saturday on the area north of the base gymnasium. The general public is invited to the review and graduation exercises, according to BAFB officials.

300 Attend First Wesley Foundation

More than 300 people attended the A&M Methodist Church Wesley Foundation's talent show last night.

The show was held in the foundation's student-built recreation center. According to Roland Bahlmann, editor of the "Wesleyan Window," most of those attending were freshmen.

"Even after we had put up every available chair, there still wasn't enough room for them," Bahlmann said. "We had them standing outside looking in the windows."

Entertainment was given by Bryan girls. Sylvia Rankin was mistress of ceremonies. Sylvia and Sandra Kelly sang duets, Camille Walton sang torch songs, and Shirley Walton did a baton twirling act.

Captain John D. King, BAFB flying instructor with several years of dancing experience will entertain the audience with his fast tap-dancing routine. The audience will be treated to some "real gone" Dixieland Jazz by the "Six Shades of Blue" Jazz Combo.

A/B Fred Gruller, a former Houston disc jockey and radio announcer, will be master of ceremonies. Plenty of free admission seats will be available in the gym for the big show, according to a band spokesman.

Because of its series of six off-base concerts in Brazos County, the 515th Band is well known to local residents.

GI Bill Includes Korea Vets

Any Korean veteran who has served 90 or more days of active service since June 27, 1950, may apply for training under the new Korean G.I. Bill, according to Bennie A. Zinn, veteran advisor.

To be eligible, he must not have any discharge other than an honorable discharge, Zinn added.

A veteran must start training by Aug. 20, 1954 or two years after his separation from service, whichever is later.

He has seven years from his service separation date to complete training, and is entitled to one and one half times as many days of schooling as he had on active duty up to a maximum of 36 months.

To enroll, the veteran may apply to the nearest Veteran's Administration office for form number 7-1990. He should fill out this form and send it back with a photostatic or a certified copy of his separation papers, said Zinn.

The VA will then send the veteran a certificate of education and training.

It is important that he submit this certificate to the veteran advisor in Room 102, Goodwin Hall, Zinn explained. This step is a guarantee of his training under the bill.

The enrollment date for correspondence courses begin the day of the first lesson is sent to the veteran by a school. He must receive this lesson within two years of his separation date. If discharged before Aug. 20, 1952, he must receive it on or before Aug. 20, 1954.

To receive full benefits, veterans must take at least 14 hours of credit work.

Under the new bill, he must purchase all books, supplies, and pay all fees.

Each month after entering training, the veteran will receive a check from the VA for $110 if he is single and has no dependents. If he has one dependent, he will receive $135. Those with more than one dependent will receive $160.

Married veterans should include a certified copy of their marriage certificate with the enrollment form. If he has one or more children, at least one copy of one child's birth certificate also should be included.
