

McHan: Arkansas' Key Man No Quarterback Hurts U of T

However, as mentioned before, McHan is not the whole Razorback team. No man on the Arkansas front wall weighs less than 200 pounds. It stacks up as the biggest line in the SWC this season.

Standouts on the Porker line are tackles Buster Graves and Tom Garlington. Graves is a six-foot, four-inch junior tipping the scales at 240 and Garlington is a six-foot, three-inch junior weighing in at 225.

Sam Dumas, the smallest man on the Razorback line is an even six feet tall and weighs a meager 200 pounds.

In a general outlook, the Porkers don't rate very high in the conference predictions because of their lack of depth in the backfield. For instance, if McHan is injured, Arkansas has only inexperienced Ralph Troillet and Bob St. Pierre to take his place in the man-under position.

The Aggies are fortunate in playing Arkansas late in the season. Something could very easily happen to McHan because the Razorbacks play Texas before they meet the Aggies, and the Longhorns aren't going to forget the two-point defeat the Porkers handed them last season.

The only victories Arkansas reaped last season were in their games with A&M and Texas University. So the Aggies will be out for a win too.

Arkansas has an end problem to solve as a result of the graduation of receivers Pat Summerall, Bill Jurney and Frank Fischel. They also lost a good tackle in Dave Hanner. However, lettermen Jerry Brogard and Red Warren are slated to be McHan's main downfield targets.

Texas University's Longhorns will pose as one of the top contenders for the SWC football championship of 1952.

With 20 of his 35 lettermen returning, Coach Edwin B. Price needs only to find a quarterback to guide his team to a successful season.

Bolstering three All-American candidates, End Tom Stollhandske, Guard Harley Sewell, and Halfback Gib Dawson, and a possibility in Fullback Richard Ochoa, the Orange and White will make a strong bid for top honors.

Tough Schedule

Facing one of the toughest schedules in TU's history, Coach Price will have to depend partly on untried sophomores.

Bunny Andrews, junior from Dallas, now stands as the most backfield, but around him they must fill in with inexperienced sophomores. The line is also lacking in experience. Coach Rusty Russell is enthusiastic over the prospects which have shown up for training, but we've got to be shown something that will replace threats like Fred Benner.

Malcolm Bowers, Duane Nutt, Hayes Gilliam, and Sam Stollenwerck will be the top Pony passers. The best receivers are back, but there is a lot of experience needed to round out the new combinations into paying things. There are too many seasoned teams in the conference to place the Mustangs higher than just out of the cellar in sixth place.

Baylor Loses Everything

Baylor is like A&M. She lost her best backfield. But the added loss of their tough and powerful defensive wall of last year places them in the cellar. All but one of the linemen who held A&M's 1951 powerhouse backfield so well at crucial times, is gone. Only Bill Athey returns. Larry Isbell is gone, and with the All-American passer, the combination of ends, Harold Riley, Stanley Williams, and Bob Trout. These three wing men rolled up a total of 1,264 yards and 10 touchdowns last season. The Bears took a tough loss when they left.

Inexperienced sophomores must move into key positions. Richard Parma, co-captain, must carry the burden of the backfield on his shoulders. Coach George Sauer faces the job of not only rebuilding an offensive backfield, but also replacing that "good old Baylor line." It's a big job. And with the material he has, it looks too big. We pick Baylor for the cellar.

Rice Owls

Rice has one of the finest safeties in the Southwest in little Norton Nesrsta. Nesrsta caused plenty of trouble to the Cadets in the last Rice tussle in Houston.

But tall, lanky Dan Drake is the mainstay of Rice offense this year because of his throwing and kicking ability.

A&M may have an advantage in playing the Owls the week after they meet Arkansas. The Porkers are touted as "upset-makers." Rice may not be in good condition following their trip to Fayetteville.

Taking all things into consideration, however, the A&M and Rice game should be as exciting a match as the Aggies play all season.

likely man to take over as quarterback. T. Jones, Childress senior, is the other choice Coach Price has.

Playing only 12 minutes in 1951, Andrews is lacking in experience. Jones has the edge here with 124 minutes of playing time, but Price seems to be pointing toward Andrews.

Texas will operate from the Split-T formation for a second the Missouri Valley Conference last season.

A San Angelo All-American, Clatterback will have two fine receivers downfield for his targets in Vic Hampel and Howard Clapp. Hampel was All-MVC end last season.

From all advance indications, A&M and Houston should put on an exciting and fast ground and aerial game in Rice Stadium in the Aggies first showing of 1952.

straight year. Last year, the Longhorns generated a lot of power from this attack, but fell short of a well-balanced offense for lack of a passer.

The stalwart defense of the Longhorns of '51 is gone. A complete overhauling job faces Line Coach J. T. King, but fast and hard hustling sophomores look like they might fill the vacant spaces.

Mustangs

To take care of the punting for the Mustangs will be Norton, who led the conference last year and who ranked fourth nationally with a 41.8 average.

Don Cole, Duane Nutt, and Don Donovan, all first-year men, can each do a good job in this department if the occasion should arise.

The Mustangs have a good chance this year to do better than any SMU grid team since the 1947 and 1948 championship clubs. They are rated fourth in the conference, but Coach H. N. (Rusty) Russell has reported he is well pleased with his squad, and that they look good.
