THE BATTALION

Welcome TCU Students

TCU STUDENTS, we welcome you to our campus.

It is not just a halfhearted welcome that dies on our lips as soon as we have said it. We are sincere.

A couple of weeks ago a lot of us got a taste of what it means to be "kings for a day" on somebody else's campus. That was our first game of the season against the University of Houston in Houston.

And now we have the opportunity to show the same spirit of hospitality and sportsmanship we have enjoyed on your campus in the past.

However, this is not a welcome that

Pogo's Success Is In Understanding

LAST NIGHT about 700 students and College Station residents said "Howdy" to a man who has come a long way in the cartoon profession. He is Walt Kelly.

Demonstrating the finest spirit of cooperation throughout his stay, Kelly proved to be one of the best entertainers on the campus this fall. We think he'll hold the record "Mr. Cooperation-Plus" here for a long time.

The reason why is evident.

Kelly shows in his Pogo strip, he understands people. He understands human nature, the instincts which drive and direct us.

His last drawing on the stage was for a spring solely from the motive of reciprocity.

Between TCU and A&M there has been an increased effort to improve the friendship and cooperation we both know can exist.

Relations could be allowed to grow worse and lax, or our energies can continue to be directed into channels of good will.

We prefer the latter course.

Our Student Body, both through leaders and through individuals, have expressed their endorsement of this policy of friendship and welcome.

Not only are you welcome for this weekend, but anytime you are on our campus.

boy who was unable to attend. His father had died recently. Friends of the boy, who also is named Walt, asked he draw a cartoon for him. It was the first time in the eight hours Kelly had been on the campus, that he choked.

His understanding of us, is explained most easily by Kelly himself. He told the attentive and responsive crowd, "The things Pogo and his friends do, you do. It's a way at looking at oneself and wondering."

Keep them wondering Pogo, we're for you.

Graves-McKown Battle

The Cadets will counter with a T and split-T formation. Last weekend the Aggies faced a single wing and double wing offense and were soundly trounced, while the TCU eleven stopped the split-T attack of the Razorbacks effectively.

Most of the Horned Frogs offense depends on a potent passing attack, while the Aggies who also have a good passing game, have made most of their touchdowns on the ground.

Neither squad can boast of their defensive platoon, although the TCU ball-toppers haven't given up as many yards or touchdowns as the Cadets.

The game will be a battle of the Ray's, Ray Graves, quarterbacking the Farmers and Ray McKown calling signals for the Horned Frogs. Graves is eighth in the nation in total offense, while McKown is fifth.

Graves is second in the nation in passing while McKown is in seventh position although he has more yardage than the Aggie ace.

The Aggies have the lowest average gain passing in the SWC while the Horned Frogs have the best. The Cadets have also given up more yardage in the air per team than any SWC school.

The TCU defense has the second best aerial defense in the conference according to statistics, limiting their foes to 75 yards per game.

The Horned Frogs have the best per game defense in the SWC while the Aggies have the worst. The TCU squad has allowed their rivals only 200 yards per contest while the Cadets have let their foes have 330 yards per tilt.

There will probably be a near capacity crowd at the game, since the Texas Arkansas game will be the only other afternoon competition.

The Horned Frogs have been picked as favorites in the game, most writers favoring them by two touchdowns.

Everything points to a good battle with plenty of action from both squads, and an individual duel between two of the best quarterbacks in the nation.

Few Rooms Here

Male students, say the Aggies, probably will be able to find rooms in A&M dormitories. Female students are tactfully not mentioned.

The TCU band, which played for the Eisenhower rally Wednesday morning at the T-P Reservation and will perform a like service for Stephenson this afternoon, has a few tricks scheduled for the Aggies.

The band, under direction of Lewis Gillis, will introduce an original number between halves at the football game. The number is "University Drive" and will be performed in swing formation.

Band to Play

A bus leaves at 7 a. m. tomorrow morning to take the band to College Station, where they will tout for a pep rally behind the Aggie MSC.

TCU head yell leader Ken Jones is planning some intricate card routines to be performed during the game.

A great variety of buses have been chartered for the trip, with one of the most popular package excursions being that of Zeke Handler, whose fleet departs from downtown tomorrow morning. Zeke offers a chicken dinner and white-coated waiters, all for $12.50 and reservations are available.

The Frog footballers are in fine shape for the Aggie argument, the 48th in a series, except for the absence of John Harville, key wing-back.

Ray McKown, currently leading the Southwest Conference in total offense, will be back at the TCU helm after sitting out the Trinity affair.

ARTS AND DARTS

'Sniper' Scores Hit; Plugs Babes

By JERRY BENNETT
Battalion Amusements Editor

"The Sniper" starring Arthur Franz, Adolphe Menjou, and Marie Windsor—Columbia Campus Theater.)

"The Sniper" takes a few pot shots at an unusual plot and scores a bulls-eye with a top-notch thriller.

Although the story's basic theme may seem exasperating to members of the male population, and Aggies in particular, it is the film's novel approach to the battle of the sexes that provides the interest.

Arthur Franz portrays an anti-social screwball who can't get along with women. Frustrated because of his unpopularity with the opposite sex, he starts picking them off from roof tops with a high powered telescopic rifle. The sport soon becomes such fun that Arthur even bags an unsuspecting extra painting a smoke stack high above the city's streets.

Although "The Sniper" is another of the many psychological movies that have flooded the cinema market for the past several years, it avoids the usual stock corn on which many of these films are fed. The story is told in almost straight documentary form with no leather couches, neurotic women, or leering psychiatrists to spoil the film's aim.

Scenes which appear as if they were photographed through Franz' telescopic sight as he selects each victim add suspense to the fast moving film. One of the most suspenseful scenes comes when Franz turns his sights on a couple embracing in a good night kiss.
