Razorbacks Seeking Second Conference Win Against Ags

Arkansas comes to Kyle Field Saturday night in an attempt to fight their way back into the conference race. In conference play so far, the Razorbacks have a win over Baylor, and losses to TCU and Texas.

The Razorbacks are expected to again mix up a series of offenses that were unleashed against Baylor in their 20-17 victory earlier this year, but which only sputtered against Texas University last week. They are expected to use the split-T, the deep split, and winged-T, and the tight-T. With star quarterback Lamar McHan out, sophomore Bob St. Pierre is expected to alternate in the quarterback and tailback posts with junior Ralph Troillett. Troillett engineered the winning touchdowns over Baylor after McHan was injured.

Expected to be at full strength again will be Lewis Carpenter, a man who can play just about any position on the team. Carpenter has played fullback, end, defensive end, and defensive linebacker, and has done a fine job at all positions. He is expected to start at the fullback post Saturday against the Aggies, because of a shift in the backfield with the injured McHan out.

Expected to be one of the closest games so far this year Arkansas comes to Kyle Field with a 2 won 4 lost record, but no one can sell the Porkers short. There are 23 returning lettermen of the squad. Six of these men have earned two previous letters.

This week, it is either do or die for both teams. The Razorbacks have two conference losses which practically eliminates them. The Aggies have one defeat and a tie on their record, and cannot lose another if they want to finish near the top this year. Arkansas was run over by TU recently by a 49-7 score, so they will be out for revenge. The Aggies are ready also after a stinging 21-20 loss to Baylor. This points up a good game with plenty of action.

Favorites Have Easy Going

By GUS BECKER
Associate Sports Editor

Last week was upset week, with some upsets occurring that we didn't pick. This weekend everything will run true to form with the favorites having little trouble from their opponents.

The west coast will again furnish the major upset of the week when California's Golden Bears break loose against the UCLA Bruins. California was an upset victim in last Saturday's major upset, but will turn the table against the favored Bruins and halt their six game win streak.

The Blue and Gold colors will win for sure, since both teams have these colors, but Johnny Olszowski of the Golden Bears is too much for the Bruins to hold, it looks like California, 26 to 7.

The colors, Blue and Gold, will clash again when the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame and the Midshipmen from the United States Naval Academy meet in their annual classic. The Fighting Irish may have found their stride, since they have won two straight, but the Midshipmen are always tough for the Irish. An upset for the Blue and Gold of Navy, 21 to 13.

In the midwest, the sound of thunder will come from the Michigan-Illinois contest, where the underdog Fighting Illini will roll over the Wolverines. The Maize and Blue Michigan is up among the contenders for the Rose Bowl bid, (See OTHER GAMES, Page 4)
