

Seniors Air Troubles At Special Class Meeting

 cised the seniors for not having turned in reports to the committee which will compile grievances and take them before college officials. "There has been much talking, but no action. Only one report has been turned into Joe Wallace since the commander's meeting Monday. They must have facts to back up any statements," said Kruger.
 Many seniors sounded off in favor of going immediately to the Board of Directors with their complaints. Committee member Sam Harper insisted that the committee must act the right way. He said the committee should go through proper channels in getting an audience before various college officials. "If proper results are not obtained from one level, Harper said, the committee can go to the next highest person on the chain of command."

Turn In Rank
 Harper explained that if after going through the proper channels the committee could still get no results, then "lets put our diamonds and buttons in a bag and throw them at 'em."

 Putter Jarvis, corps chaplain, insisted that if we all run up and turn in our commissions we would get nowhere. He suggested that a member of the state House of Representatives be contacted if college officials do not satisfy the committee's demands.
 In other business the seniors heard reports from standing committees of the class. Claud Holmes, reporting as chairman of the beautification and parking committee, read a letter which will be sent to President M. T. Harrington which contains several recommendations concerning parking conditions on the campus.

Senior Privileges Announced
 Holmes also announced his committee felt it should be a senior privilege to walk on grass in certain places on the campus. Included were the grass around the MSC, new Administration Building, and between dormitory rows in both the freshman and upperclassmen areas. His committee also recommended that punishment for violation of walking on the grass be two hours extra duty on the first offense, Senior Court the second time.
 The class approved and adopted the committee's report.
 Mattei reported for the traditions committee in the absence of chairman Don Greaney. The committee had agreed to see that proper observance is given Silver Taps by making certain all lights on the campus, especially around the Academic Building, are turned out during Silver Taps. The committee also recommended that it be made a senior privilege to go through the MSC on the way to yell practice.

The committee announced it was in favor of a man being allowed to wear boots as long as they are in the corps of cadets and taking senior privileges. They asked that a list of company privileges for underclassmen be drawn up and brought together in an effort to standardize privileges in all units.

Quizzes Satisfactory
 Continuing the report of the traditions committee, its secretary Bob Travis said the committee had examined the "campusology" quizzes given to freshman by the military department, but they found these quizzes were made up by executive officers of companies in the Third Division and were satisfactory.
 Travis also said the committee had agreed that a reporter from the class should be elected to report items concerning the Senior Class to The Battalion. Following the Traditions Committee report, the seniors approved a motion that no one be allowed to wear boots unless he had been a student here for more than three semesters. This motion is to become effective after January.

Wallace reported the purpose of his committee on grievances to the class. Although not a committee of the senior class (appointed by the corps commander) he felt they should be told of its purposes and objectives because every senior was concerned in the issues at stake.
Class Decide Action
 The chairman requested that members of the class decide their own line of action.
 Jim Moore suggested former student clubs be sent a report of this committee findings.
 Charles (Red) Scott reported on the Student Senate. Scott said most seniors were present at all meetings of the senate and they were showing interest in the group. He urged seniors to take any questions they may have to senior members of the senate.
 Mattei also gave a short report on the Student Life Committee meeting.
 The seniors approved all reports of committees.

Lyle Wolfskill, head of the Senior Court, stressed the importance of that body of seniors. "The 'Blue Book' (college regulations) doesn't say how to interpret certain regulations; that is why we have the Senior Court to act as a judiciary authority to enforce articles of the cadet corps," said Wolfskill.
Midnight Yell Practice Asked
 "I believe the Senior Court can do much in disciplining men who are hard to handle," Wolfskill added.
 Upon the recommendation of Tom Collins, head yell leader, the seniors agreed it should be a senior privilege not to follow the band to yell practice.
 Collins told the seniors many of them had attended the last midnight yell practice with the wrong kind of spirits. He asked the seniors to please not come to yell practice drunk. "It is up to the individual on this matter," said Collins, "I doubt if the class as a whole could keep drunks away from mid-night yell practice," he added. The head yell leader also asked the seniors to help him stamp out the use of "Aggie confetti" at yell practices.

 Collins said he was doing everything possible to get the college authorities to let him hold an out-of-town mid-night yell practice. He mentioned the Dean of Men had told him a yell practice might be held at a dance or some place inside a building. Collins promised to let the men know as soon as possible what would be done for the SMU corps trip.

Approve 'Aid' Game
 Bill Munnerlyn told about plans for holding an all-orps football game which would pit the Army against the Air Force. The game would be played to raise money for the Student Aid fund. The seniors endorsed the benefit game unanimously.
 Members of the band said the Aggie bands could probably have a drill at half time if the student aid fund committee so desired.
 The discussion of grievances of the class followed.
 Many seniors sounded the opinion they would be willing to give up their contracts with the government if many things on the campus were not corrected.
 Said one senior, "We don't want any antiwastes going out of here; if boys can't take it here, they won't be able to take it after they get into the service." He was referring to the few students who had written letters home complaining about conditions at A&M.
Meetings More Often
 Several seniors complained the meeting of the class was too long in coming. Mattei told them he had trouble with conflicting meetings of other organizations which already were scheduled. The seniors agreed they could meet out doors if necessary, but wanted a meeting again within the next week or two.
 The petition by sophomores which was included in a motion of the senior class (although not available at the meeting) reads as follows:
 "We the undersigned members of the Sophomore Class, feeling a recent administrative order affects us more directly than any other class, respectfully submit this petition to military authorities of this college and request this particular order to be immediately rescinded.
 "It is the opinion of the undersigned that physical inspection by unqualified personnel violates right of respect for personal feelings and the right of freedom from indignity of any type. According to paragraph 3 of the Basic Policy, no custom or regulation in conflict will be allowed to prevail.
 "We do not question the authority of college officials in issuing such an order. We simply feel that such an order, on the part of military authorities, shows complete disrespect and distrust of cadet officers and of any cadet as an individual.
 "In view of the above statements, we feel morally, if not legally, justified in refusing to submit to any such ridiculous violation of personal privacy. For these reasons we, the undersigned, submit this petition and humbly request that it be given immediate consideration."
 This petition, now in the hands of Sophomore Class President W. R. (Dusty) Canon, contains 370 signatures.
