A New Life Is Waiting; But Don't Wait for It

This is the time we should be sowing our minds with the knowledge for prosper-

Extra Fat For Lean Cattle

TODAY'S housewife has added many conveniences to her home, and many new businesses are prospering because of these additions.

Take for example the soap flake makers. Wall Street Journal reports a one-third decrease in tallow sales by rendering firms.

Maybe someone at this great agricultural institution can find a way of using this over stock of fat in the diet of cattle.

Christmas Spirit For Business

SANTA CLAUS is cranking up his factory in the North Pole, and before too many days go by the Christmas spirit will again be in the air.

It won't be the holly leaf or the Christmas carols—not in late November.

The big generator for the yule spirit will come from that man called Mr. Business.

What greater commercial asset is there than Christmas? Yes Christmas, a day of giving and getting.

Flags Wave

(Continued from Page 1) seemed as if every outfit in the corps was over at one time or the other trying to put up their flag.

Other outfit banners which have seen "through the twilight's last gleaming" are A Quartermaster, A Armored, and A Infantry.

Asked what his future plans were along the flag-raising line, Clark replied, "I believe I'll retire. I'm going to have to rest the remainder of the semester after climbing Mt. Watertower.

Foster Teague at tackles, Joe Cannon at the middle guard slot, linebackers, Tommy Strait, Connell, Ed Canoy, and Huddleston, with the deep men being Gill Petty and Jim Walmsley.

The Shorthorns will use Charles Brewer at quarterback, Tooty Carroll and Joe Youngblood, at halfback and either Delano Womack or Bill Long at fullback.

If there is rain before or during the game, the Shorthorns may be slowed down as Carroll and Youngblood are very fast boys and have made the Yearlings move on outside plays this year.

Both elevens use a similar split-T offense like their respective varieties. Huddleston will be the man the Shorthorns will be trying to stop. Huddleston along with Robbins have been the sparkplugs of the Fish attack all year.

The Aggie defense will have to watch Carroll and Youngblood, while the secondary will be trying to stop a Brewer to Jones aerial combination that has clicked very well all season.

Special Train Set

A crowd of 10,000 fans are expected for the clash, besides the Aggie Cadet Corps. A special train will leave Austin at 8:30 Saturday to bring Austin fans to the contest.

On the basis of past performance, the Shorthorns will be favored, but the Aggie Fish have the material to come up with a victory.

Trotter Speaks At Breakfast Soon

Dr. Ide Trotter, dean of the Graduate School, will speak on "American Thanksgiving" at an international student breakfast at 6:30 a. m. Wednesday in the Education Building of the College Station Baptist Church.

Baptists students are invited and asked to bring an international student to the breakfast, said Cliff Harris, Baptist Student Union secretary.

Reservations can be made with Allan Cox, Tom Dunningan, or Jack Frey before noon Monday, Harris said. He added that admission is free.

UT Headquarters Planned In MSC

A University of Texas Freshman Headquarters will be set for the Aggie Fish-Texas Shorthorn football game Saturday, said Mrs. Ann Hilliard, assistant director social and education.

The headquarters will be in rooms 2A and 2B in the MSC and an information booth probably will be set up in the lobby from 9 a. m. until gametime, she said.

Editors, The Battalion:

It is fortunate that Aggie football fans are endowed with the spirited 'twelfth man' and the magnificent Aggie marching band. It helps to offset the sting of seeing their team beaten so often.

No doubt there are noble souls who can still turn the other cheek and console themselves with the thought that their fighting Texas Aggies went down fighting again.

Since then, I have pondered the question of what can be done to lift the Aggies from the depths of football despair. It is common policy, as a first step toward football reconstruction, to crucify the coaches.

At this writing there are only 36 more shopping days until Christmas. When Mr. George writes to Santa in order to get his stocking filled, you can bet your have taught the bandmaster or somebody to kick conversions.

The cause of our dilemma cannot be traced to the coaching staff. I think all that they need is more material to work with. Any team that is built around one man is as unstable as a house built on quicksand.

Today, Mr. George's hair is a little grayer and he's probably still finding it hard to sleep worrying about whether or not Mr. Graves will be patched up enough to go against the tea-sippers on turkey day.

Football, as a game, is an important part of American life. It's a sport that provides a lot of fun for both fans and players and is also a source of prestige.

At a parting shot I must reiterate that the alumnus not only can but should snap into Operation Football without further delay.

last dollar that he'll ask for two smart quarterbacks—just in case one breaks down. Furthermore, Mr. George wants lots of beefy guards; rangy, speedy ends and about four good tackles to replace Mr. Little.

The Aggie alumnus could play Santa Claus to Mr. George. They are the key to our football dilemma. It is my opinion that they should immediately embark on a nation wide campaign to sell young men on the idea of being an Aggie.

able. Any fair-minded Aggie doesn't expect to win every game nor the conference title every year. That situation would not only be monotonous but bad for the conference as well.

There isn't a college in Texas with a better faculty or student body than A&M. It's a big school and presides as the kingpin of the vast A&M system.

As a parting shot I must reiterate that the alumnus not only can but should snap into Operation Football without further delay.
