

GRAND CHAMPION HAM—Mrs. J. A. Arhopulos, proprietor of the Twelfth Man Inn, is receiving the winning ham from Don Tabb, superintendent of the Little Southwest Livestock and Ham Show. She bid $140 for the ham.

Herzik Named Livestock Show Grand Champ

Jack Herzik of Schulenburg was chosen grand champion showman of the Little Southwest Livestock Show Saturday at the Aggie Rodeo Arena.

Named Champion Sheep Showman in the afternoon, Herzik went on to win top honors over the champions of the other livestock divisions, horses, swine, and beef cattle that night.

Reserve Champion of the show was A. H. Ringhoffer of Cross Plains. Ringhoffer was also champion beef cattle showman.

Other divisional champions were S. E. Neff, horses, and Jerry Johnson, swine.

Judges of the contests were: cattle, Bennie Baskin of Bryan; swine, Wallace Kimbrough, Bryan; sheep, J. M. Jones of the animal husbandry department; horses, U. D. Thompson of the Extension Service and champion showman, Jake Schrum, Sugarland.

Ham sales at the show grossed $1400, said Don Tabb general superintendent.

The grand champion ham was auctioned to Mrs. J. A. Arhopulos, proprietor of the Twelfth Man Inn, for $140. Mrs. Arhopulos bought four hams for $191.

Proceeds of the show and sale will be used by various judging teams, Tabb said.

AAUW Hear McCloud Tell Political View

"McCarthyism is of help in preserving our liberties, said J. D. McCloud, speaking before the AAUW workshop Saturday, in the Consolidated High School library.

Head of the Department of sociology at Sam Houston State Teacher's College McCloud stressed that we can maintain our liberties only through a freely informed and enlightened public opinion.

Approximately 70 people attended the workshop, which followed a luncheon held at 1 p. m. in the MSC.

A panel discussion was held concerning the different phases of danger to our liberties in the community. Participating in this panel were M. S. Brooks, Robert Laver, Mrs. Arthur Melloh and Mrs. Emmette Wallace.

A delegation of AAUW members from Huntsville also attended the special yearly project, said Mrs. W. H. Delaplane, president of the local organization.

Co-education Pressure Will Rise-McDonald

Pressure favoring co-education will increase in state supported schools in the next 20 years, predicted Dr. Ralph W. McDonald, in a speech made to Arts and Sciences faculty Friday afternoon.

Dr. McDonald is president of Bowling Green State University and an authority on higher education.

McDonald predicted that state supported schools will have doubled enrollment within the next 20 years. He also predicted greater student participation in administration and greater flexibility of courses.

When asked how successful honor systems were in other colleges, McDonald said that the trend was away from them, although administrators recognized their great desirability.

The depression of the 1930's is responsible for the smallest college age group in many years, he said.

McDonald said enrollment fees will increase and more scholarship assistance will be offered. Teachers can expect an increase in salaries, but the increase will not be sufficient, he added.

American colleges are becoming more cosmopolitan, and the population is moving to urban centers. Adult night classes and use of educational television will become more prominent in the next few years, McDonald said.

BACKWARD GLANCES

One Year Ago Today: Graduating Air Force seniors here prefer to go into active duty 30 to 60 days after graduation. Most of them think that a 120 days was too long to wait. Their point of view was, "the sooner you get started, the quicker you get out."

Five Years Ago Today: The A&M Board of Directors, meeting in Beaumont, ruled that the Annex would be used for another year to avoid overcrowding on the main campus.

Ten Years Ago Today: In "Backwash", a column by Candy Magrane this item appeared under the head of "Remember When?" It said: "Everyone you met on the campus said hello to you."

Fifteen Years Ago Today: President T. O. Walton announced that 12 new dormitories would be built on the southeast part of the campus.

CHS Children Give Clothing for Drive

The children of A&M Consolidated School this week are taking part in a national drive to collect clothing for needy children in Korea, Europe, the Middle East and certain areas of the United States.

Named Save the Children Bundle Week, began yesterday and will last through Friday.

Wearable clothing of all types and sizes will be accepted. Also wanted are blankets, sheets and low heeled shoes.

Clothing will be brought to the school, put in bundles, and sent to the national headquarters of the drive for distribution.

The school children were given leaflets to take home yesterday explaining the purpose of the drive and asking for parents' cooperation.

LETTERS

Editors, The Battalion:

I feel that you deserve some commendation for reporting the correct score Ag-Owl season baseball opener. Certainly it was about the only pertinent fact that you got straight. Actually, I must confess that the Batt story of the game made fascinating reading, especially for those who saw the game, but it should have been labeled as fiction and not presented as news.

The brevity which you profess to find so dear in letters of this nature precludes my naming all the discrepancies in the story, but I can pick out one or two salient factors. The yarn blandly assures the readers that "with Bobby Farmer, Jimmy Williams, and Lester Byrd parked on third, second, and first, Jerry Robinett was sent in to pinch hit for Jerry Nelson." This must make Tex Farmer very happy, as he was sitting on the bench when Robinett went to the plate. Actually, Ellis was on first, Byrd on second, and Williams on third. (Farmer had just been forced at home as a result of pinch-hitter Ellis' dribbler to the mound).

Our Sports News Editor plunges on with awe-inspiring abandon to inform his readers that the "Owl squad managed to score six times on four hits." Call in Perry Mason. Therein is born The Case of the Missing Hits, as everyone who saw the game witnessed only two safeties by the boys from the Institute. Other flagrant abuses include charging a batter for an official TAB while drawing a walk, cutting the Aggies' bobbles total down from eight to three, and a few other trivia.

Of course, I am just an illiterate engineering student who is ignorant enough of the study of journalism to believe that a reporter's primary obligation to his readers is accuracy. By the way, did anyone on the Batt staff actually see the game, or just get the story by word-of-mouth?

Bill Withers, '47

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Withers is correct on one point and perhaps on another. The first, concerning Mr. Farmer sitting on the bench, is true. Mr. Farmer had been forced out at home and Mr. Jerry Robinett's home run scored the three you correctly stated were on base. Concerning the TABs, walks, hits, and other "trivia" on the official box score, we are afraid you will have to take it up with the official scorer. The Battalion is always present at the baseball games. We hope you continue to show interest in the fine Aggie baseball team.
