"The course is in fine shape for the tournament," Fagan announced. The course is three years old with long grass greens.

The tournament will be medal competition, which means the golfer with the fewest strokes for the 72 holes is the winner.

The entry fee for the tournament is ten dollars and will cover housing and meals, which will be provided by the college.

"So far we have received 62 entries," Fagan said, "and we expect a field of 100."
