Placement Office Helps Graduates

Approximately 300 companies visit A&M every year to present the graduating students with a clear picture of the jobs offered, according to W. F. Hensel of the Placement Office.

Practically all major oil companies, feed concerns, research laboratories, engineering firms and others who need college graduates are represented during the year, he said.

Information concerning interviews may be obtained at the Placement Office, Bulletin Boards, and from reading The Battalion.

These interviews are designed to help students, and all graduating students are urged to take advantage of them, Hensel said.
