and tests."

The traditions and customs should be made specific. However, each article, such as upstreaming on the aggie line, should have a clause providing for periodic revision, said David Wray, senior horticulture major from Center Point.

"Defining of customs and traditions should be done by the Former Students Association subject to approval by the student body and the college administration," said Robert L. Rush, senior agricultural education major from Dallas. "The Senior Court should enforce the rules."

Men should be able to know what to expect for custom violations and what things carry a punishment, said Troy G. Portie, junior civil engineering major from Sulphur, La.

No Longer Tradition

Batt Needs Camp Correspondents

The Battalion needs summer camp correspondents from every Air Force and Army camp where Aggies are going to be, said Roland Bing, manager of Student Publications.

Experienced writers are not necessary, Bing said. All the Battalion wants is the news and activities.

The correspondents will receive stationary and postage for their reports. They also will receive copies of The Battalion while at camp, Bing said.

The Battalion is interested in camp activities, and wants complete coverage. Correspondents will write one report weekly, and two if possible, Bing said.

Men interested in correspondent positions should contact Bing at the Student Activities Office or Ed Holder, managing editor of The Battalion.

facts in the case at their trial, the court probably would have acted differently.

"It is very important that a man say everything possible in his own defense when brought before Senior Court," said Kruger.

"Too many times cadets get the idea they should say little or nothing. Some of these juniors even mentioned the more you say in your defense the worse the punishment is."

Kruger warned cadets to present all facts before Senior Court or receive punishment on what little knowledge the court may have concerning the particular case.

ONCE upon a time a huge, ferocious zoo that adjoined a small college. This mangy beast terrorized students alike by growling at them from dawn till dusk. One day, late in the afternoon, word reached the Dean that the lion had killed the lion.

The Dean was delighted, and sent a telegram to the lion's owner, starting in front of him.

"Did you kill the lion?" the Dean asked. "Sure did!" said Charlie. "There was a big lion, about 250 pounds, that was pretty hot, but I didn't mind him. He was cool, comfortable Van Heusen Van Heusen." That smart collar looked good on him. And imagine, I only paid $3.95 for this suit. "But what about the lion?" asked the Dean. "Well, all of a sudden," continued Charlie, "from a circus leaps out from behind a tree, whipped off my tie, opened my collar, and Van Dual became the best-looking man I ever saw in a shirt on campus. Now I was ready for anything. "Yes," said the Dean. "So I shoved my trusty right arm down his tail . . . and pulled him inside out! "My word!" said the Dean. "Lefty" Jones graduated Cum Laude.
