Campbell Attends Reserve Camp

Lieutenant junior grade John R. Campbell of the U. S. Naval Reserve will spend two weeks of active duty at Minneapolis, Minn. this summer.

Campbell is a member of Fighter Squadron 705 at the Dallas Air Station. This group is called "Weekend Warriors" because they report at a meeting of the Naval Reserve in Dallas once each month. After the two weeks of training, Campbell will act as a ferry pilot for the Dallas station until September.

A senior student at A&M, Campbell will return this fall to complete his work on a BS degree in animal husbandry.

AH Class Learns Equipment Use

The Animal Husbandry 406 class learned the importance of proper equipment in the use of feeding beef cattle Tuesday, according to J. K. Riggs, associate professor of animal husbandry.

During a three-hour laboratory period, the class discussed the reasons for building adequate shelter, using the proper types of stalls, mangers and feeders to increase profits, said Riggs.

If these proper management practices would be practiced to a greater degree by the cattleman, Riggs said the profits would increase because there would be less feed waste, less labor involved and the beef animals would have an opportunity to grow under better conditions.
