e Well-Baited Hole Pays Off With Fish

By PETE HARDESTY

Unminded fishermen who do not mind spending a few dollars in preparation for catching fish will be interested that a properly prepared carp hole will pay off during the summer months.

These fishermen in this area have long turned up their noses at carp. It is not generally known that they can be a fine dish if the cook will also take a little time in preparing the table. If carp are taken from fresh, cool water, their flesh is firm and delicious.

The best eating the dark streak along the side of the fish should be removed. (Keep the dark streak of meat, if it is to be used as bait.) It is also best to skin the fish before in order to catch carp it is necessary to "bait a hole." This spot that is somewhat calm and secluded, not necessarily deep. Clean moss and other water growth away from the hole for a distance of about six feet. Bait this cleared area as in the following bait:

One part cottonseed meal
Two parts soaked corn (soak for two or three days)

One part old stale white corn meal
Mix these together and add one cup of sugar and one small box of anise seed (whole seed preferred)

This mixture in a screen sack and weight the sack it will not float. Lower the bait to the center of the hole. Two or three days later the carp will have gathered around the bait. Use tackle "on the rugged side," a tackle. A bobber may be used, or the tight line and a sinker should be attached about 8 to 10 inches from the hook.

Hook is the most important thing. It should be no larger than a No. 1/0 (the smaller the better) and should be sharp. Caution should be exercised by the fisherman to not approach the baited hole just as though he was hunting for deer.

This is the recipe for the bait to be used on the hook:

1 1/2 cups Quaker yellow corn meal
2 heaping tablespoons of Quick Quaker Oats
1 level tablespoon of sugar

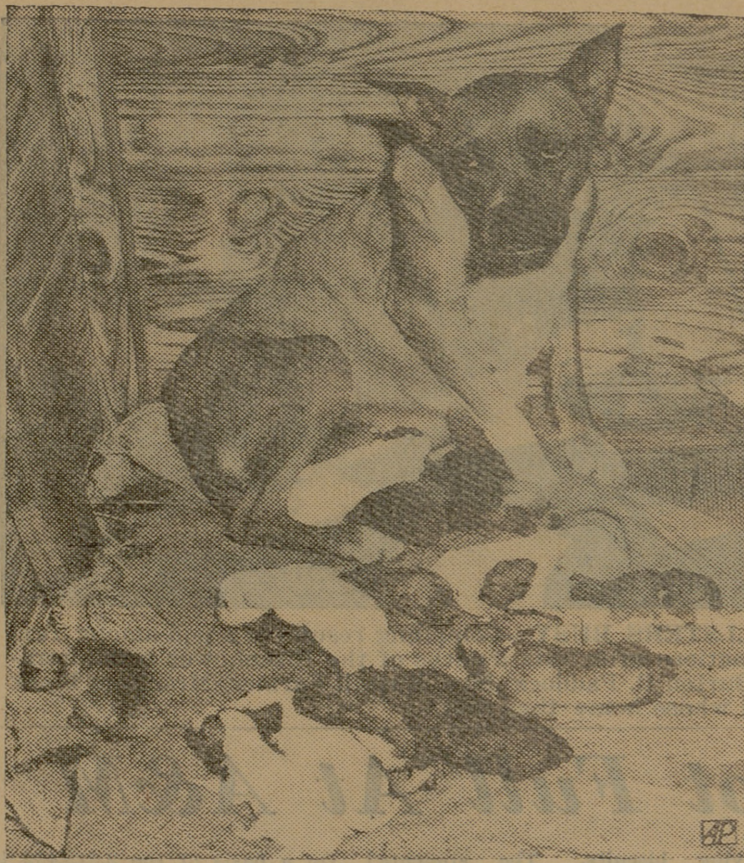

1 cup of cold water
Corn meal, sugar, and oatmeal are stirred together. Two of the cornmeal is added and stirred in. Place on a hot fire until the dough works up into a stiff ball.

Remove the pan from the fire. Sift the rest of the cornmeal into the dough and work it well into the mixture. The dry dough is placed on a paper and thoroughly rolled out. This is not the conventional carp doughball. Unlike most doughballs it is tough and durable and almost impossible to remove from the hook. To bait the hook, roll out a portion of the dough—enough to cover the barb and the tip of the curve of the hook to the lower part of the hook. The most successful size is a small bit that the fish can swallow without a long period of sucking.

One of the carp's bad name is due to a lack of fighting spirit. Fish of up to fifty pounds have been caught. Most lakes and streams contain carp. When fish are numerous they will take the bait and start a run like a game fish. Many people have cultivated and eaten carp for over a hundred years. Give this fish a try during your next fishing trip. You will be converted after you land the first big one.

"WHAT DID I DO TO DESERVE THIS?"—Maybe that's what Mutt, pictured here with her litter of 13 pups, is whining. The 3-year-old Pitt Bulldog is owned by Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Williams of Marshall. It is her third—and largest—litter, and exceeds by one what Dr. Joe Black Jr., Marshall veterinarian, calls a normal brood.

Ticket Drawings Held For Football Seating

Drawings to fill ticket applications for the 1953 Aggie football season were made August 6th with Mr. Homer Adams drawing the first pill which contained the folder number of orders for particular games.

Others helping with the drawing were: Mr. John W. Hill, Workmen Compensation Insurance Director, Mr. Reed McDonald, Assistant controller of A&M System, Mr. Pat Dial, business manager of the athletic office, and Mrs. Mary Ruth Wilson, ticket manager. Mr. Adams is an insurance agent and the secretary of the Aggie Club.

The folders contain 50 ticket applications for games. Each folder is numbered and this number, contained in a pill, is placed into a jar. No folder bearing the first number drawn will be given priority in each group until the tickets for any particular game has been exhausted.

After those orders were drawn, the option rights were drawn. These were filed in folders also, but apply only to new stadium seats for home games.

Some of the lucky ones to have their folders drawn first for the Texas University game were: group one, folder 4, including in order, (1) Lee Dugan of Bellaire, Texas, a "T" card holder, (2) J. Roy Quinby of Chillicothe, Texas, a "T" card holder, (3) Freddie H. Walter, an employee of the Agriculture Experiment Station, option holder in folder eight for the Texas University game was Claude E. Wimberly of Galveston, Texas.

University of Kentucky: group 1, folder 8, Homer B. Convington, (class of 1937) College Station, Texas.

University of Houston: group 1, folder 2, O. D. Dinviddie, class of 1922 and a "T" card holder, Hart, Texas. Option holder—folder 1 E. J. Mosher, Houston, Texas.
