Nine Airmen Await Rescue After Crash

LUKE AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. (AP)—Nine airmen, a blistering day and a chilly night on the desert behind them, awaited rescue today, nearly 20 hours after bailing from their damaged plane.

They fell into desert terrain so rugged that two ground rescue convoys were forced to turn back. The Air Force now plans to use a helicopter to pick them up. Apparently none was injured after their four-engine K-C97 collided with a B-47 while refueling in flight.

The ships limped back safely, the Stratofort to Davis-Monthan Air Force base, Tucson, with its crew aboard and unhurt. The flying tanker's pilot, Capt. F. F. Jenkinson, brought his plane down here. Its home base is Smoky Hill Air Force base, Salina, Kan.

The search for the 'chutists was taken up by 35 planes before a jet pilot sighted them "alive and appearing unhurt" near the remote southwestern Arizona town of Sundad. Their fires directed planes which dropped supplies during the night.

President Outlines Leaders' Qualities

"We have a few students and some former students who will continue to believe that the board and other forms of hazing are necessary to produce 'a good Aggie.'" Dr. David H. Morgan, president of the college, made this statement during his speech on leadership before a group of cadet officers during yesterday's 9 a.m. orientation session in the ballroom of the Memorial Student Center.

Even though this belief is contrary, Dr. Morgan said, to the state law, the regulations of the college, the teachings of psychiatry and psychology, the principles of our democracy, the beliefs of our religion, certain individuals continue to think that the board is necessary to produce a good Aggie.

He said there are certain fundamental differences between democratic and autocratic leadership which he would like to bring out. Leadership in America is based on persuasion rather than on force, which, unfortunately, is used in other countries, he said.

Based on Education
"Leadership in our country is based on education rather than on propaganda. We can maintain our position in the world only through our superiority in education since we do not have superiority in numbers."

Dr. Morgan outlined 10 points of leadership which he considered most important:
1. Physical and nervous energy must be possessed by the leader. He must be ever on the alert not to permit his feelings at the moment to influence the decision that he must make.

2. The leader must possess a sense of purpose and direction. His objectives must be desired not only by himself but by those to whom he is responsible.
3. Enthusiasm. He must be "sold" on the activity under way if it is to be meaningful and if he is to benefit from it.

4. He must be friendly . . . interested in the men under him. He should be on the alert to recognize outstanding performance of an individual.
Cites Story
Dr. Morgan cited a story which a former student told him to illustrate his fourth point.

The former student arrived on the campus some years back. He had not eaten on the train and was hungry and tired. An upperclassman recognized the newcomer's plight, and took him to the mess hall.

After the boy had eaten, the upperclassman took the new student around and introduced him to some of his friends.
Dr. Morgan pointed out that the (See LEADER, Page 6)

More Freed Prisoners Return Home

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—Another 422 American repatriates returned home yesterday from long imprisonments in Communist prison stockades in Korea.

Several hundred relatives and friends cheered their arrival on the navy transport Gen. John Pope—fifth repatriation ship to dock at Ft. Mason in the past two weeks. The Marine Phoenix, carrying 374 more ex-prisoners, is slated to dock Sunday, the Military Sea Transport service said.

Yesterday's returnees said at least two so-called "progressives"—Americans whom fellow prisoners said cooperated with the Communists in prison camp—were beaten aboard the Pope.

Cpl. Harold W. Beerbower of Saegerstown, Pa., said about 10 "pros" were aboard the Pope and they were segregated after the beatings, which occurred the first day out of Inchon, Korea.

His account was supported by Pfc. Thomas M. Caroland Jr. of Cedar Hill, Tenn. Caroland said one of the beaten men was "just a jerk who was afraid," but he called the other "a real rat who spied for the Reds and got several Americans tortured."

Paoge Says PMA Forsakes Farmers

TEMPLE, Sept. 10—(AP)—Representative W. R. Paoge, Waco, censured the Production and Marketing Agency today over acreage allotments, claiming the agency was not fighting the farmer's battle.

In a meeting attended by West Texas cotton and wheat farmers, Paoge said that one million acres normally planted to cotton were lost during the drought in 1952 and '53.

If the PMA, in setting up allotments for next year, only takes into consideration actual crop acreage planted this year every county in the state will lose its pro rate share of acreage, he said.

Paoge stressed that the PMA must take the farmers' figure on acreage prepared for planting.

"You are the most direct representative the farmers have," he told H. H. Marshall, representing the PMA at the meeting, "and the PMA has a duty to the farmers of Texas and the nation. It is your obligation to fight the farmer's battle," said Paoge.

Li'l Abner Returns To Battalion Tuesday

By BOB HENDRY
Battalion Feature Editor

Li'l Abner was 19 years old when he was born 19 years ago and he has stayed the same ever since.

And still at 19, Li'l Abner returns to The Battalion Tuesday. Created in 1934 by cartoonist Al Capp, Li'l Abner is probably the most famous hillbilly in all America. Since all of Capp's cartoon characters are created in someone's likeness, it is not surprising Abner is Capp himself.

Gets Idea
Capp claims he got the idea of his comic strip while listening to a radio blaring from a courtyard in New York City's Greenwich Village.

"I love mountain music, good old mountain music, played by a real hillbilly band," rasped the radio, and Li'l Abner was born.

Keeping Li'l Abner an idiot for his 19 years of life, Capp had to give the lad something, so he gave him a wife, Daisy Mae. Daisy was inspired by movie actress Veronica Lake who was at the peak of her career at that time.

And, as might be expected, it wasn't too many panels later until the couple became the parents of a bouncing baby who bounced down the kitchen drain.

Battalion readers will join the Yokum family somewhere around this point.

Draws Features
Capp got his background for Li'l Abner while wandering through the hill country of Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee. But the features of Li'l Abner himself can be attributed to Kentucky.

While traveling in that state, Capp decided to draw a portrait for one of the mountaineers. He caricatured his own head and the hillbilly's body. The mountaineer refused to accept it.

Capp then traveled to New York where he became a cartoonist for the Associated Press. While there, he drew a comic strip and became the youngest nationally syndicated cartoonist in the country.

Worst in Country
This strip, however, gained the reputation of being the worst in the country and it was soon discontinued.

Soon afterwards, Capp became assistant to Chester Gould, creator of Dick Tracy. Gould and Capp had such violent disagreements that Capp quit and, later, started his satire on Tracy, Fearless Fossdick, which is combined in his Li'l Abner strip.

Then came Greenwich and success.
