

Two Assistant Coaches Switch Jobs for Year

Two A&M assistant football coaches have switched jobs to kick off this year's offensive and defensive set-up.

Dalton Faircloth
Creates New Brainchild

Dalton Faircloth, last season's defensive coach, will spark offensive tactics. He replaces Gilbert Steinke who has moved to the defensive position.

Faircloth took offensive work to try out his new pig-skin brainchild, a T formation with an unbalanced line, which the Aggies will use this year.

He has designed the formation to add more power to offensive tactics.

Starting his third year here as assistant coach, Faircloth has coached Louisiana's De Quincey High School. He also has trained teams at Louisiana college and Mississippi's New Albany High School.

Steinke Took Job

Steinke took the job of rebuilding the Aggie backfield in 1951. He had been assistant backfield coach.

Former Texas A&I All American halfback, Steinke turned pro with the Philadelphia Eagles after finishing college. He led the National league in punt returns in 1946.

A&M Faces Obstacles

scales to 224. Scott is in his last year, but Winkler is a junior.

Regular offensive tackle last season, Scott is expected to turn in top performances this year. His favorite role is defensive ball, so with his offensive experience he may be top lineman on the Aggie squad this year.

Eric Miller, Paul Kennon and Benny Sinclair will split the starting honors for the Cadets. Miller and Sinclair were the choices in spring training, but Kennon has been pushing for a berth on the first team.

Kennon is a junior and weighs 185 pounds. He was an All-American in Louisiana in high school, but was handicapped by injuries last fall. He went through spring drills in good shape and looked good.

Miller Is Big, Fast

Miller is a senior weighing 210 pounds. He is a valuable two-year letterman, and has had good experience at both offense and defense. He is big, fast and served as a starter last fall and in spring drills.

Sinclair is a junior, and like Kennon was handicapped last year by injuries. He is a top-notch pass receiver and is expected to start with Miller.

He was outstanding freshman two years ago and showed great promise in spring training. Sinclair weighs 193 pounds.

It all adds up to light players, a few experienced key men, some tough obstacles to beat and a team who wouldn't even stop drill for the rain and mud during the opening week of workouts.
