Dallas' Dark Streets Are 'Off Limits'

Stay off Dallas' dark streets this weekend if you don't want a suspicious husband's or father's shotgun leveled at you.

Big "D" is plagued by a series of attacks on its women, and gun sales are soaring. Rewards are out and the police are working frantically to nab the attackers who "murdered and ravished" Mrs. H. C. Parker of Dal-

It might be a good idea to keep on the well-lighted streets, and report immediately any suspicious-looking prowlers.

A man was making a speech on the val- shoulder of the road and the car turned end

He told the audience that one thing flashed across his mind time after time while the car was rolling over. He "knew" he was going to die, and he kept thinking "What a useless end. What a futile end."

This is one of the few accounts which we hear from people who come so close to death. Perhaps it is an indication of what some of the thousands of people think in the last seconds of life who die each year on the highways of the nation.

His thought keeps echoing through our minds each day as we pick up the reports on how many "died in traffic accidents" the night before. The figures are staggering But the most staggering factor of all is the thought which this man had when he was at the door of death.

NT Students Tires Of Loyalty Oaths

On the "pink" side of life—The Campus Chat of North Texas State College tells this little yarn.

A senior at the Denton school got tired of signing statements concerning his loyalty during his college career.

The student "signed" his oath the other day, and gave it to the notary public. The officer notarized it without question. The name?—Lavrenty Beria.

Speaking of "tinted" organizations, The Toreador of Texas Tech says "an organization for encouraging school spirit among freshmen men" is being established. The group will make its first appearance at the pep rally preceding the Tech-A&M game. They call themselves the "Red Shirts."— Be careful, boys. The University of Texas is signing up members to their Great Issues course. "The Red Menace" will be the theme for

The Daily Texan reports President Logan Wilson urged students join the program. He thinks it will be of great value to them.

He bases his statement on, "To combat communism effectively we must first understand it. We shall need something more than bombs and bombast.

'More of our people ought to know what communism is, how it originates, and why it spreads. It is particularly important for our leaders of tomorrow to have this knowledge and to be able to use it."
