System Executives Discuss Secretarial Training Course

Heads of schools, services and departments discussed yesterday afternoon management aspects of how to improve secretarial work throughout the A&M System. Executives of college and system offices on the campus discussed how to improve instructions to their secretaries, how to improve their techniques in giving dictation and how they could improve their secretaries' loyalty to them and their offices.

A movie, "Telephone Courtesy," produced by Bell Telephone Co. was shown Monday and Tuesday at the secretarial training course in the MSC ballroom. Because of the enthusiasm shown by some of the women attending the course, further topics may be discussed at a later date, said Henderson Shuffler, director of system information and publications.

The training course held on the A&M campus will be conducted at other times throughout the system. All the collegiate branches as well as the services will give secretarial training courses, Shuffler said.

WATER DAMAGE—Ray Smith, first sergeant of B Composite inspects an M-1 rifle for possible damage. The company's rifles were on racks in the gun room of dormitory 2. The building was flooded early Wednesday morning by unidentified vandals.

SWC Rule Forbids Cheaper Tickets

Because of a Southwest conference rule, A&M students cannot expect lower-priced football tickets for their dates and wives, according to Barlow (Bones) Irvin, director of athletics.

At present, date tickets are $2.50 for games played on Kyle Field and $3.60 for games away from A&M. The lower price for home games is possible only because a conference rule allows end zone tickets to be sold at the $2.50 price.

Tickets for other games must be sold for $3.60, because a conference rule says that the $1.20 student ticket can only be sold for use by a student.

If the student ticket is used by anyone except a student, the opposing college can demand payment of the difference. Southern Methodist University demanded and receive such payment from A&M a few years ago. The A&M athletic department now offers a $9.60 season ticket, valid for all games played here, to student wives.

No other school in the Southwest conference has such a plan. It is not possible to offer the $1.20 student ticket to wives because of the ruling which limits their use to students only.

Emphasizing that A&M students should not expect lower priced tickets for their dates, Irvin pointed out that only through a thorough examination of the rule book was the $2.50 ticket for home games possible.

"A&M students do not seem to realize that the athletic office does not set the ticket price," Irvin said. "Furthermore the student does not expect prices in the MSC to be lowered for his date."

Provides Best Sanitation

Modern Dairy System Processes A&M's Milk

By JAY IRELAND
Battalion News Writer

A&M students are served milk and milk products from one of the most modern dairy systems in the nation.

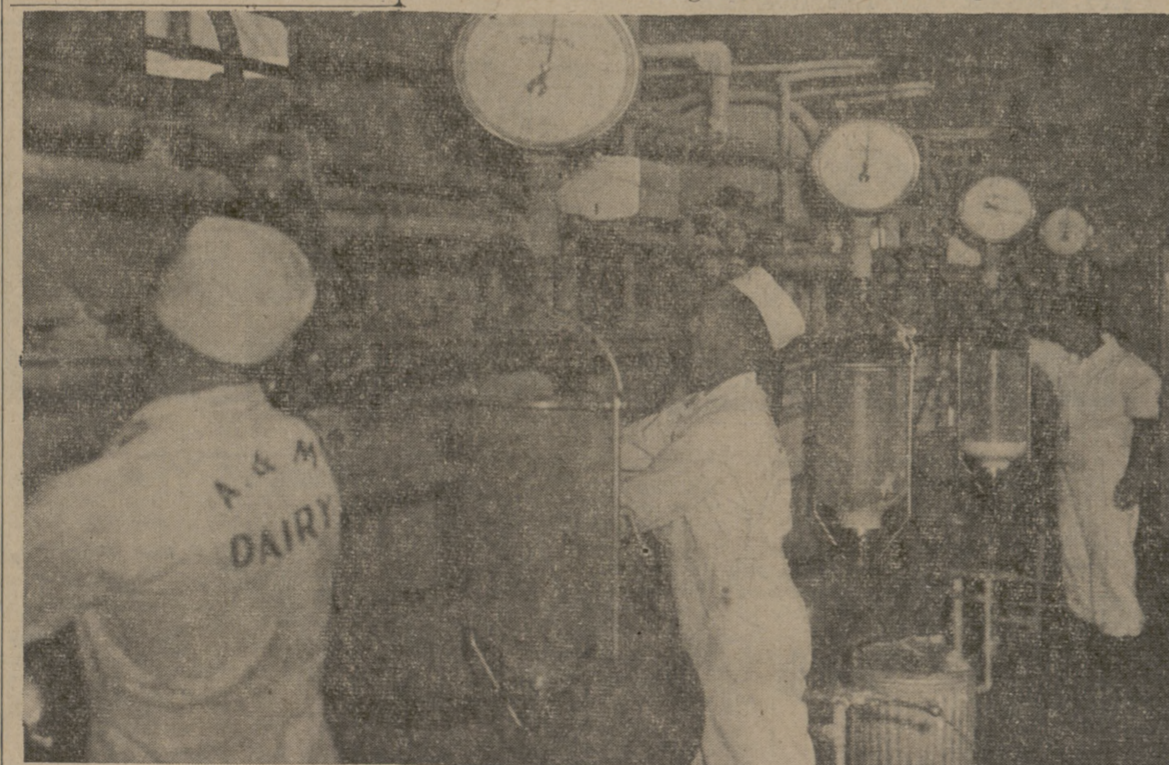

"The dairy barn and milking apparatus of this college are the most modern available," said W. Carl Van der Zant, dairy husbandry department.

The automatic milking method used provides the best sanitation processes attainable. The completeness of the sanitation process leaves no possibility of any germs or bacteria occurring in the finished product. Van der Zant said.

Each cow is inspected daily to insure cleanliness and freedom from disease. Before each milking the cows' udders are washed to further insure sanitation.

The building that houses the WHOA, BOSSY—Employees of the A&M dairy handle the machines which automatically milk 150 cows a day. The cows are trained to step up to the milking machine as soon as the animal in front of them has moved on.

Unidentified Persons 'Float-out' Dormitory 2

Army Still Has 26 Contracts For Juniors

a surplus of 26 junior contracts because of poor academic records and a drop in the number of transfer students expected to take advanced military science.

The Fourth Army allotted A&M 380 contracts for this year. Out of 525 of last spring's army ROTC sophomores, only about 325 were qualified for contracts this fall, Myers said.

This figure was raised by air science students who transferred to army ROTC.

Myers indicated the principal reason for the decrease was poor grades.

Approximately 14 transfer students who enrolled in army ROTC in September resigned from the course, Myers said. He said about half the new transfers, who could have taken advanced army ROTC, either did not apply or dropped the course.

There were 354 new army ROTC contracts awarded this fall, Myers said. This figure is 26 short of the number of contracts which the Fourth Army allotted A&M.

Myers said that he estimated last spring that the army ROTC here would need about 400 contracts for juniors enrolling this fall.

Fourth Floor Flood Damages Entire Dorm

The identity of persons who flooded dormitory 2 early yesterday morning was still unknown today.

Dean of Men W. L. Penberthy told The Battalion that the college had not uncovered a lead.

A number of unidentified persons went up to the fourth floor of the non-military dormitory about 3 a.m. and removed ten flush valves from the toilets, said Bennie Zinn, assistant dean of men. He believes more than one person was involved because one person would not take the risk of being caught removing the valves by himself.

After the valves were removed water flowed and soon every room and hall from the top to the bottom of the dorm was three to four inches in water. According to Zinn, many students had shoes, suitcases and other property damaged beyond repair.

Although there is no estimate of the total damage to the building, ten flush valves worth $11 each are missing, Zinn said.

The incident was first reported when W. G. Brazeeale, dormitory 2 counselor, arrived at 8 a. m. and saw water running through the doors. He phoned for janitors to clean up the building to lessen the water damage.

Must Be Stopped

Speaking for the college on the incident, Zinn said, "We, the college, want such occurrences stopped because of the great waste of time on the part of whoever removed the valves, and also of the students in the dormitory."

Important People Visit A&M Campus

All kinds of official people come to the A&M campus.

Take, for instance, the green sedan parked in front of Goodwin hall yesterday.

In an official-looking sticker on the back window big black letters showed the importance of the car's owner.

The sticker said, "Official U. S. Government Taxpayer."

Building Construction Causes Heating Failure

Ten college buildings were without heat because of construction on the hot water lines, said T. R. Spence, manager of the physical plants.

The central heating system of the college is out of operation for Law, Puryear, Hart, Bizzell, Goodwin, Bolton, and Guion halls, the College Administration building, the Memorial Student Center and the YMCA.

The extension of the heating system to the new Physical Education building and to DeWare field house required changing the five-and six-inch hot water lines in the heat tunnel to eight-inch lines, Spence said.

The new pipe has been installed for some weeks now but delivery of the eight new expansion joints to go in the new lines has been delayed by a strike in New York, Spence said.

"The contractor on the work had been expecting delivery for several weeks, hoping to get the lines completed before the cold weather started," Spence said. "When he learned that it will still be several weeks before the expansion joints can be expected, he started working installing some substitute joints."

Winter Uniform Is Optional for Game

Students can wear winter uniforms for the football game in Lubbock this weekend if they want to.

The winter uniform can be worn in Lubbock, and going and coming. Students remaining on the campus will not be allowed to wear winter uniforms.

It is not yet known when the corps will change to winter uniform permanently.

"It depends on the weather," said Fred Mitchell, corps commander.

Delaplane to Serve As Economics Head

Dr. Walter H. Delaplane, newly appointed dean of arts and sciences, will also serve as head of the economics department for the time being and possibly until the end of the year, said Dean of the College J. P. Abbott.

Delaplane was promoted from head of the economics department to dean of arts and sciences at the Sept. 26 meeting of the board of directors.

Delaplane will divide his time between the two jobs, Abbott said.

Aggieland Requests Outfit Pictures

All student photographers should begin collecting snap-shots of their outfits to appear in The Aggie-land '54, said B. C. (Dutch) Dutcher, co-editor.

Pictures of outfit activities, dances, stunts, or accomplishments will be used in the annual. These shots will be called for later by editors of the Aggie-land.

BULLETIN

Six flush valves were removed from the toilets on the fourth floor of dormitory 6 last night. Because the flood was discovered sooner, damage was not as heavy as in dormitory 2, said Bennie Zinn, assistant dean of men. The "float-out" occurred about 4:30 this morning. By the time water was turned off, there were from two to three inches of water on the fourth floor.

"In addition" he said, "every floodout causes needless damage to student property and to buildings. Every time a dormitory is flooded, considerable damage is done to floors and walls by water seeping through and running down the pipes. This water also causes falling plaster and cracks paint," he added.

Steps were taken to discover the identity of the vandals, Zinn said.

Rodeo Team Will Go To Sam Houston

A team to represent A&M at the Sam Houston State college rodeo was elected Tuesday night by the Rodeo club.

The rodeo is sponsored by the Nation Interscholastic Rodeo association.

Members elected to the team and the events in which they are entered are Bobby Rankin, steer wrestling, bare-back bronc riding, ribbon and tie-down calf roping; James Dickey, steer wrestling, bare-back bronc and saddle bronc riding.

G. A. Burleson, steer wrestling, bare-back bronc and bull riding; Virgil Patrick, ribbon and tie down roping; and R. S. Higgins, steer wrestling, bare-back bronc and bull riding.

Buddy Fincher and Tom Montgomery, arena repair chairmen, gave a progress report at the meeting. They asked that anyone wishing to help repair come out to the arena.

Rankin, club president, said entry fee books will be open at the saddle and sirlon club meeting Tuesday night. Those unable to pay entry fees then may pay later, he said.
