Aggies Can Help School If Compliment Is Honored

The Fort Worth police chief has paid Aggies a compliment that they should not forget.

He has said that A&M students have always acted like gentlemen during a Fort Worth corps trip. He believes they always will.

If the A&M students will live up to the chief's expectations this weekend, they not only will help the reputation of their school but possibly save themselves and others from physical injury.

Fort Worth, like other cities, has its hoodlums who attack people for no other reason than the enjoyment they get from the beatings. Uniforms seem always to attract this element.

Therefore the student body should stay on its guard, not only to protect itself—but to make certain it does nothing to provoke trouble.

This can be done if students honor the police chief's compliment. There is nothing wrong in fighting back if one is wronged. But to start trouble is to endanger a school's reputation and the lives of persons involved.

The hoodlums have already made their reputation. No Aggie should be selfish enough to want to take any of it away from them.

Letters To the Editors

Editors, The Battalion,

You may be interested in a news story which was released yesterday by the Shreveport Times. Though the names of the teenagers were not included in the story I should like to supply that information. The assistant editor of the yearbook "Sequoyah" is now a freshman at A&M. He is Raymond McWaters. The editor was Marilyn Register, who is a freshman student in our local college, Centenary. However, the young lady in charge of all copy for the book is a freshman at our sister college, TSCW. She is Miss Julia Sauer.

The article is as follows:

"FAIR PARK ANNUAL WINS TOP HONORS"

New York, Oct. 9 (Special)—Teen-age editors of Shreveport have captured coveted honors for outstanding excellence, it was announced here tonight by the Columbia Press Assn.

The occasion was the 13th Yearbook Contest held on the campus of Columbia University, a derby in which junior journalists from all parts of the country were entered.

First place awards in the category of "printed yearbooks for senior high schools, classification 1501-2500 pupils" was captured by Fair Park High School of Shreveport for their publication "Sequoyah."

Sincerely,
Mrs. N. M. Hearn

Subscription Sales Begin For Tigerland

Yearly subscription sales for the A&M Consolidated high school annual, the Tigerland, began yesterday.

Mrs. Muriel Orr is sponsor. Sports, society, and other editors will be appointed soon.

Other members of the staff are Clifton Bates, Maurice Olian, Myra Jackson, Shirley Brown, Janie Daniels, Jean Adams, Bonnie Carroll, Patsy Nolan, Carolyn Landiss, Carole Williams, Mary Lou Ergle, Marian Gaddis, John Harrington, Jo Ann Walker, Ann Hite and Pat Owen.

Principal J. J. Skrivanek said businessmen should make sure that the advertisement solicitor who visits them should be an approved representative. Last year several men were "taken in" by outsiders, he said.

The students soliciting this year are Carolyn Landiss, Pat Owen, Janie Daniels, Maurice Olian, Martha Ann Williams, Elsie Richards, Penny Laverty and John Harrington.

These solicitors will have letters of introduction with them when they ask anyone about placing ads.

police should contact this headquarters before he is fined, Wilkins said.

The assistant commandant said a counselor probably could prevent a student from being fined. Students fined by police must get special permission from the 4th army or Air university to receive their commissions.

Ask For Help

Wilkins explained Aggies should ask counselors for help since any offenses will be reported to the college. Wilkins said that college punishment would be better for a student than having his chances for a commission endangered.
