A&M Picked to Beat Mustangs

By JERRY WIZIG Associate Sports Editor

This is the Week of Decision for Southwest conference football teams.

Four teams now have a good chance for the conference title, but the list will be cut to two if this week's games go as predicted.

Texas and SMU face elimination from the race, and if they win Baylor and Rice will be favored to battle it out for the championship.

After Saturday, the schedule gives the Owls the advantage. Rice gets A&M and Baylor at home and plays weak TCU in Fort Worth.

A&M over SMU, 21-14. Baylor over Texas, 27-21. Rice over Arkansas, 28-13. TCU over Washington State, 20-7.

The big question mark of the Aggie game is how will the team come back after last week's 41-14 loss to Arkansas.

Due for Letdown

The Cadets were due for a big letdown after winning five of six games. Every team usually plays one game a season in which nothing goes right, and the Aggies now have played theirs.

A&M had one of its best workouts of the season Monday, indicating that the team has the right mental attitude. The Aggies have shown they are a good football team.

SMU will have Frank Eidom, Roy Pace and Don McIlhenny, three outstanding runners, to replace injured Jerry Norton.

Ellis in Groove

With Don Ellis again back in the throwing groove, the Aggies will play one of their best games of the season and will come through with another victory in a thrill-packed football season.

The Baylor-Texas game is one of the most important of the season. The Steers have to win to maintain a chance for the championship.

Baylor may have trouble passing, since Gilmer Spring and Carleton Massey are about the two best in the conference at rushing the passer.

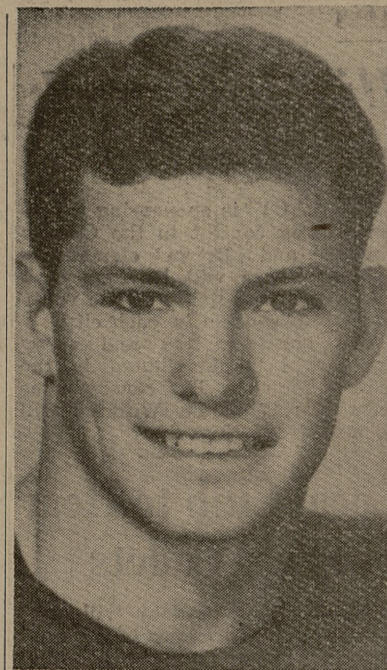

Owls in Top Form

Arkansas has never beaten Rice in Houston, and the Owls figure to be in top form after an incidental loss to Kentucky last week.

The Razorbacks reached their season peak against the Aggies, but Lamar McHan will give Rice lots of trouble.

TCU, in the midst of one of its worst seasons, travels to the Northwest to meet a weak Washington State team.

Louis Capt Is Ace Aggie Relief Guard

By ROBERT BROWN Battalion News Writer

When the two platoon system in college football was killed, sports pages almost forgot the all-important relief men who play such a vital part in every game.

Such is the case with Louis (Louie) Capt, senior relief guard for the Aggies.

Capt was a first string defensive guard on last year's A&M squad, but the new rule edged him off the starting eleven.

The fact that he is seldom noticed while in the game is tribute to Capt. The opposition makes little yardage through the middle while starters Marvin Tate and Sid Theriot are in the lineup.

A native of Uvalde, Capt came to A&M in 1950 on a four year scholarship.

Played 175 Minutes

Because of his role as a relief player, few spectators or sports writers know when Capt is in the game. But statistics show that in the seven games played by the Aggies this season, Capt has compiled 175 minutes of playing time.

The unbeaten A&M rifle team Saturday will match its marksmen against Southern Methodist university at the A&M rifle range at 8:30 a. m.

The Cadet squad, led by high point man Howard Mims, will be going for its third straight win of the season.

Guy Andrews, team business manager, urged all team members to be on time for the match.

In high school he was an all-round athlete, earning letters in football, basketball, track and baseball.

He is president of the Southwest Texas A&M club and is a member of the Saddle and Siroin club and the Senior Court.
