Jackson Named To Committee

J. R. Jackson of the agricultural education department has been requested to serve on the adult and young farmer education committee by the Texas Education agency. The purpose of this committee, according to E. V. Walton, head of the agricultural education department, is to develop ways and means for improving adult and young farmer education in those communities of Texas where vocational agriculture is taught.

Jackson has developed adult and young farmer programs at La Grange. Jackson taught vocational agriculture in La Grange high school before joining the staff of the agricultural education department.

Film Library Adds New Shows

The Cen-Tex Film Library has added several new films since the first of the year.

Among the best of these films, said W. W. McIlroy, director of the library, is, "Silver Anniversary". This film is about the Future Farmer organization and is receiving wide acclaim from teachers of vocational agriculture in Texas.

Twenty-five copies of this film have been placed in various libraries throughout Texas. The films were donated to the Future Farmer organization by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company. The Cen-Tex Film Library has one copy of "Silver Anniversary" which is circulated among the teachers of vocational agriculture who are members of the library.

The American Plant Food Council, Inc. has placed on deposit with the library, "Making The Most of a Miracle". Melroy says this is an unusually good film. Other films purchased by the library for the use of the agricultural education staff and members of the library are "ABC of the Automobile Engine", "ABC of The Diesel Engine", "Diesel, The Modern Power", and "ABC of Hand Tools".

The library has also purchased a copy of, "We Are The Aggies." This film is used by members of the agricultural education staff when they speak to high school groups. Members of the library also have access to this film.

These films bring the total number to 345 different titles in the library. In addition these are 50 sets of 35 mm slides and over 100 different 35 mm filmstrips. All of these films, slides, and filmstrips are available to members of the agricultural education staff and members of the library.

The Cen-Tex Film library is operated by the agriculture education department for Texas vocational agriculture teachers.

Editors, The Battalion:

It was very encouraging to read the article in The Battalion concerning the organization of a group of non-military students on this campus. May I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your action which in my opinion was long overdue.

There has been considerable criticism of non-military students by cadets this year as in past years. There has also been considerable criticism of Army by Air Force Cadets, criticism of Infantry Cadets by Armor Cadets, etc. and vice versa. Much of this criticism is indicative of group pride. Some of it is well founded and some of it is not. But is it the Artillery's place, for example, to feel slighted because the Signal Corps criticizes them and attempt to get all Artillery Cadets on all the various functions by organizing the Artillery in a block? Or is it their place to select the best men for the job regardless of branch?

I have attempted to draw a parallel between what could happen on this campus and what is about to happen should the new group organized become, shall we say, misguided. This was of no concern to me until the so called "...prejudice from the corps..." became an issue. So rather than an open split between this group and the corps I would like the opportunity of meeting with the unnamed spokesman of the group or the leaders of the group at their convenience so that we might work together toward a "Greater A&M" as was the objective stated in the article. I live in 119-12 and would consider it a pleasure if you would allow me to aid you in greater non-reg-cadets relations.
