

Club Discusses Civil Defense

Members of the Bryan-College Station Business and Professional Women's club met Tuesday night for a dinner at The Oaks.

Those attending the meeting were seated at quartet tables centered with bouquets of summer flowers.

Mrs. H. S. Creswell, president, presided. The invocation was given by Miss Lucy Harrison.

In charge of the evening's program was the Civil Defense committee, composed of Mrs. Grace Martin, Mrs. Sam Merka, Mrs. Virgil Parr, Mrs. Virginia Watteringer, Mrs. G. B. Vance, Mrs. H. S. Creswell, Miss Lucy Harrison, Miss Ada Duncan and Miss Alma Ewing, chairman.

Miss Ewing introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Miss Mattie Treadwell, regional director of Women's Activities in Civil Defense.

Miss Treadwell was a colonel in the WAC's during World War II and was a member of Oveta Culp Hobby's staff. She has recently helped in the writing of a book, to be published soon, on the history of the WAC's and their service to the world. At present her headquarters is in Denton.

In her talk she stressed the importance of being prepared for atomic attack, tornado, fire or other disaster. She pointed out that confusion could be avoided by selecting certain persons to take charge in case of disaster and by designating a specific place for them to meet.

She suggested several ways in which the average citizen might be better prepared for civil defense. She recommended that the community offer courses in such things as first aid, fire fighting, and home nursing.

Following her talk Mrs. Ima Hardin gave a demonstration on first aid using Mrs. Dan Thompson as a model.

Mrs. Grace Martin, state coordinator of Women's Activities in Civil Defense, displayed an exhibit showing materials and first aid kits which should be kept in the home at all times. She then passed out pamphlets on preparation for defense.

Visitors to the meeting were Mrs. A. D. Graham, Mrs. E. C. Mohelman and Miss Kahtleen Moore.
