

Student Program Under New Post

The student life program at A&M has been reorganized, with all phases of student life under the newly-created post of Dean of Student Personnel Services.

Four major departments are under the new post—student affairs, military students, student activities, and the Basic Division.

The change is designed to "balance student life programs for military and civilian students and to expand the work of the Basic Division to include all classes," according to President David H. Morgan.

A faculty committee is now looking for a man to fill the position of Dean of Student Personnel Services. Until they find one, the president will serve in the position, with the departments reporting to him.

Qualifications for the job say he must be "a man with special training and experience in student personnel work, guidance, counselling and psychology."

The new organization was effective Sept. 1, but the new dean will probably not be picked before February, and possibly not until later, said Henderson Shuffler, system information director.

He are the four departments in the new plan:

• Student Affairs—Headed by Benni A. Zinn, former assistant dean of men for civilian students, this department will include the civilian counsellors, veterans' advisor, civilian dormitory operations, campus security, and housing.

• Student Activities—Headed by W. L. Penberthy, former dean of men, this department will contain intramural athletics, clubs and organizations, Town Hall and other music activities, student concessions, and other organized student activities, such as dances.

• Commandant of Cadets—This remains essentially the same, with Col. Joe E. Davis, commandant, supervising the tactical officers and the students who are in the corps of cadets.

• Basic Division—The counselling and guidance facilities of the Basic Division have been expanded to all classes, instead of just freshmen. For this part of its work, the Basic Division will report through the Dean of Student Personnel Services. For its regular academic work, it will report through the dean of the college.

Also under the supervision of the Dean of Student Personnel Affairs, but not in departments, will be the college YMCA, student publications, placement and student labor, and the college hospital and health program.

Included in this new organization are the consolidation of the placement office and the student labor office into one office, and the expansion of the college hospital to provide a complete health program. The Memorial Student Center will remain as it is in the present organizational set-up, under its own board, reporting directly to the president.

Minor details of the new organization have not yet been worked out, Shuffler said. "This is just the overall plan," he said.

agriculture at the University of Nevada.

Barlow, who was also head of the A&M research foundation, will head all of Washington's engineering facilities, including the state's engineering extension service, experiment station, and research work.

A native of New York, Barlow attended Purdue university, the University of Minnesota, and New York university. He came to A&M in 1940 as head of the aeronautical engineering department and became dean of engineering in 1942.

Barlow was director of the College Station Chamber of Commerce and Civic Development association, a member of the Inter-City Relations committee, Sul Ross Lodge of the Masons, the Tau Beta Phi recreation council.

Barlow was also the organizer and drummer for Bud Barlow and the Brazos Bottom Boogie Busters, a faculty orchestra.

At his new post at the University of Nevada, Bertrand will serve as dean of the College of Agriculture, including the schools of agriculture and home economics, and also as director of the agricultural experiment station and of the cooperative extension service in agriculture and home economics.

Bertrand has been a member of the faculty here since 1946, and has been in charge of the Basic Division since it was organized in 1950.

He moved from assistant dean of agriculture to take the top spot in the freshman counseling division, called the college's "non-degree-granting school."

Bertrand graduated from Texas Tech in 1940 and took his advanced work at Cornell university.

Before coming to A&M, he served as a research fellow at the University of Missouri and as a member of the staff of Sam Houston State Teachers college.

He joined the A&M staff in 1946 as an assistant professor of rural sociology. In 1947 he became assistant to the dean of agriculture, directing a guidance program for agriculture students.

From 1942 to 1945 Bertrand served in the naval submarine corps. Entering as an apprentice seaman, he was discharged as a lieutenant after 21 months service in the Pacific on the submarine "Bowfin."

Replacements for the two men have not been named, and probably will not be named until later in the school year, said President David H. Morgan.

Until replacements are named, R. P. Ward, assistant dean of engineering, will be acting engineering dean; and Cliff Ransdell, assistant dean of the Basic Division, will be acting dean there.

Activities Fee Saves Money For Students

The student activities fee is optional again this year, said W. D. (Pete) Hardesty, business manager of student activities.

Hardesty said, however, that he did not see by the average student could afford not to pay his student activities fee.

"It is only a matter of opinion," he explained. "But the student really saves money by paying his fee."

The fee is only $21.90, Hardesty explained, and if the student purchased all the things separately, it would cost him $75.

Tickets to athletic games would be $23.00 if purchased separately. The Aggie year book would cost $7.50, Town Hall ticket $4.50; subscription to the Battalion, $6.75; school magazines, $1 and Great Issues and Recital sets, $3.00.

If the student purchases his student activities tickets, Hardesty said, he is really saving $23.85.

Tomato Special Weingartens Has

In yesterday's Weingartens advertisement in The Battalion, the special item on bananas was put in by mistake.

The item should have read "California Tomatoes, nine cents a pound."
