Count Your Blessings

If you think radar enforcement of traffic speed limits is bad, you don't know when you're well off.

The following is a recently adopted traffic regulation:

"If an accident occurs as a result of speed or negligence, and does not result in death, the offender will be imprisoned for one year and his driving license will be withdrawn. If an accident results in the death of any passengers, and the driver is proved to be the cause, he will be executed, whoever he may be."

There's no need to get excited about this, because the law was recently adopted in Saudi Arabia. And so far one man has been executed because of it.

As the National Safety Council says, "Drive carefully; the life you save may be your own."

Movie About A&M Viewed By 43,000

The movie "We are the Aggies," a movie about A&M student life, has been viewed by approximately 43,000 persons since its premiere six months ago.

The film has been shown in Texas, several other states and at least three foreign countries—Egypt, Turkey and Mexico.

The shooting script and final narrative were written by Harry L. Kidd jr. of the English department. Photography was by Howard Berry, director of the photographic and visual aids laboratory of the college.

Twenty-seven prints of the film have been distributed, according to C. G. (Spike) White of the student activities office.

Coeds On Display In College Papers

By JON KINSLOW
Battalion Managing Editor

Glancing through the papers from Texas colleges that have come across our desk within the last couple of weeks we immediately noticed the abundance of pictures of pretty coeds displayed. It was homecoming time for most of the schools, which means queens have to be elected. But aside from girls, the students had many other things on their minds.

University of Arkansas

Students at Arkansas are going games before we start thinking about that." Any comment now?

Another problem relating to Saturday's game in which the SMU Mustangs gave them their first defeat of the season. Recently, the UA ticket manager had this to say about requests for Cotton Bowl one ticket window was open. The tickets: "We had better wait and line may be shorter for the remaining games."

Texas State College for Women

A headline in the Daily Lass-o says, "Committee Endorses Dorm Hidden Talent Competition." The accompanying story never definitely says what is meant by "hidden talent," but it sounds like something caused by the new Dior look.

In the same paper, the following story appeared: "They say every dog has his day. Well, every cat has his week, too, and this is it—National Cat Week." It then explains the week was "designated especially for fostering better relations with all four-legged felines . . . Personally, we would like better relations with women."

North Texas State College

A columnist at North Texas be a pretty powerful bunch of guys blasted what he termed "UB to do that. In the same issue is a Hounds," which means students Dogpatch system of choosing a lives in the student union doing nothing but sitting. They don't even have television sets in their union, either.

A headline in the student newspaper says, "Officers Will Pick Up Cars in UB Driveway." They must be chasing you, but they are.

Baylor University

The Baylor university newspaper reports that $1,200 of a $4,400 goal has been collected in the school's United Fund drive. Even though this figure is short of the goal, it is still a commendable job on the part of Baylor.

Another short note from the Waco campus is this headline: "Fish Pond Is Scene Of DAP Buffet Supper." Yes, that should be quite a scene.

Texas Christian University

The recently-approved sororities groups. No one has won yet, and fraternities continue to be the big topic of conversation on the Frog campus. The college has announced what groups have been selected, and the students are having a running battle, via the school newspaper's letters to the editor column, giving the pros and cons the value of the various social

Southern Methodist University

A headline in the student newspaper before the A&M corps trip to Dallas read, "6,000 Aggies Due To Storm SMU Campus." They make one football game sound like a full-scale war.

The paper is conducting its own war, however, against the mistreatment of SMU students by a "certain business" on the Drag. One establishment objected, though, and countered with a third of a page of advertising in which it wrote its own editorial saying the newspaper was not talking about them. The final blow was struck by the paper with an editorial captioned "If the Shoe Fits . . ."

Also at the Hilltop, a fraternity housemother foiled an attempted burglary the other day. The story said a ring valued at $1,200 and a pair of reading glasses were stolen, but the thief was quickly caught.

University of Texas

A UT committee is taking an annual tour of Austin restaurants. This "Steer Here" committee will then issue a sign of approval to each eating establishment meeting the group's standards. Good idea.

And bless Bevo's horns if the boys in the state capital didn't finally win a conference game Saturday, downing TCU 35-34.

Letters to the Editors

Saturday Afternoon
Editors, The Battalion:

We have just returned from watching the Fightin' Texas Ags play a football game. As has usually been the case, A&M was short a few points, but as has always been the case, those Ags played a scrapping game until the final gun.

Right now we are wondering how, when the breaks go against us in the few remaining minutes and some of us in the stands haven't even as much spirit as the Twelfth Man should, can eleven tired ball players use every ounce of prevention they have against their opponents?

That's the spirit we'll always be proud of if we never win a game according to the score board. It doesn't take a highly spirited team to go great guns when the season has been all theirs, but the Aggie Spirit this year is coming from a source greater than that of confidence gained through previous victories.

After all, isn't one of the goals of intercollegiate sports to build modest winners or good losers? Who can say which is more important?

Big Em Army and let's beat the out of T.U.
