Hines Says Those Spiritually Guided Are Sons Of God

There is nothing in the New Testament to sustain the commonly held belief that all men are sons of God, Bishop John E. Hines this morning told the faculty and student audience which again filled Guion hall.

"Made in the image of God," he said to the Religious Emphasis week gathering, "means that there is a natural universal and permanent relationship of creaturely dependence between man and his Maker. Only some men, namely those guided by the spirit of God, can rightly be called sons of God." Hines said modern man has constantly tried to evade the fact there is nothing in our birth, as such, that offers us any guarantee of Heaven. "Actually," he added, "there is everything in our birth which indicates that we shall end in Hell, since our heritage—as natural man—is our bondage to sin and corruption which makes us prodigals and spiritual orphans rather than sons."

As RE week reaches the midpoint, dormitory leaders report that attendance at the forums and discussion groups has been very good. J. Gordon Gay, YMCA general secretary, said this morning.

One leader actually complained evenings were too short, Gay said, and that students in his dormitory kept him busy discussing their problems until well after 1 a.m.

About 50 faculty and staff members, wives and friends attended the Monday night discussion meeting in the biological sciences lecture room to hear Dr. Ellis Nelson talk on "Religious Beliefs—Their Source and Function."

YMCA chapel Monday evening to hear the topic, "Two Shadows in the Sun: A Happy Marriage." Porterfield passed out forms to the married couples which called for an analytical report on how the other marriage partner would rate the marriage by answering selective questions.

Last night a couple presented an impromptu skit in which the two hypothetically changed places for a meeting at the end of the day's work. The husband, playing the part of the wife, behaved as he believed the wife should behave when he returns home. The wife acted out how she felt the husband should behave after a day's work.

Appointment Must Be Lost In Mails

A postmaster has not yet been named for College Station and N. L. McCullough, acting postmaster, said he has no idea who the new man will be.
