THE BATTALION

THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1955

Letters Wanted

Aggies always answer a plea for help from another Aggie, and here is a call.

James Childress, class of '55, is now in a Galveston hospital recovering from a near nervous breakdown.

The Galveston A&M club is looking out for Childress, and they have written The Battalion to ask us to ask the Aggies to write Childress. He says he would appreciate some letters from his friends.

Childress, who is from Waco and was president of the Waco hometown club here, is planning to return to school as soon as he is able.

His address is James Childress, 1014 Strand, Galveston, Texas.

Aggies are known for coming through in cases like this.

Old Army

The corps is indeed going to pot. The West Area had this big water fight Tuesday night, see. Army vs. air force, as near as anybody could tell in the dark. It was a draw—game called on account of bulls.

But all they used to douse each other with was buckets of water. In the good Ol' Army days, they would have used boiling oil and sulphuric acid. (That Old Army is the Greek army, Greco-Persian War, circa 490 B.C.)

Aggies ain't so tough.

NO MORE FALLS—Tom Goldstone, left and Fred Pool watch workmen tear down the front steps of Sbisa dining hall. The steps were too steep, causing cadets to fall as they were marching up them, according to J. G. Peniston, dining hall director. He said the new steps would not be as steep. The work is a part of the renovation of the building.

High School

Hardesty said. Those interested in band work are invited to meet with A&M band members in front of dormitory 11 before noon to have lunch with them in Duncan dining hall.

Former students throughout the state are providing transportation for those visitors unable to bring their own car.

"Hometown clubs here on the campus have invited the students down and are responsible for providing them with places to stay," Hardesty said.

Crime To Speak At Meeting Here

Paul Crume, columnist for the Dallas Morning News, will be the speaker here at the Junior College Press conference banquet, March 11.

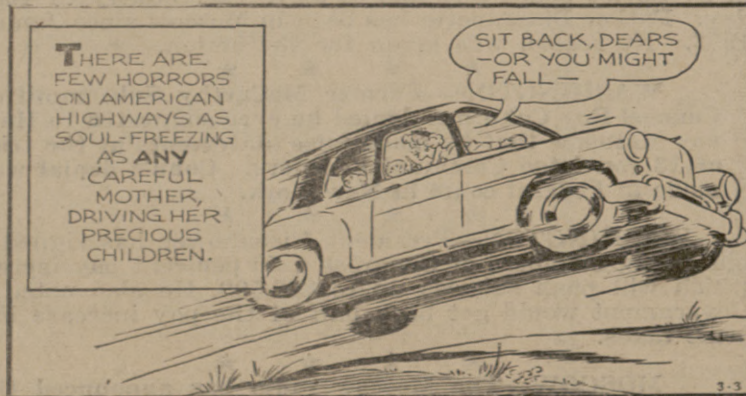

The conference will begin with a sponsors meeting Friday afternoon. The banquet will be held at 7:30 p.m. and a dance will follow.

Saturday morning panel discussions will be held, moderated by A&M students. Problems in readership, editing, advertising, reporting, makeup, feature writing and photography will be included in the discussions.

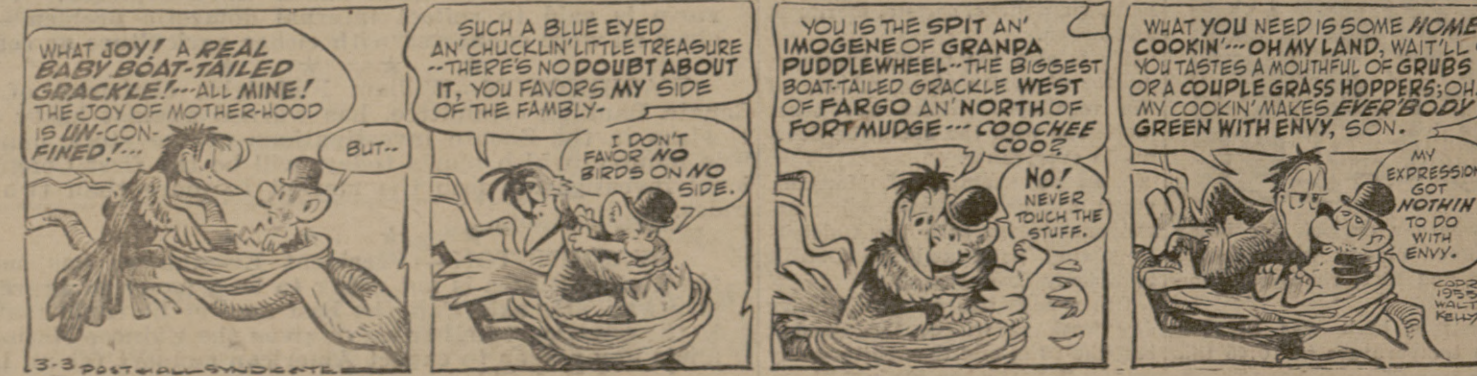

Seven colleges have registered but more are expected to attend, according to Don Shepard, conference chairman.

WEARS SPECIAL PAD
NEW YORK—(AP)—Ivan Irwin, rugged defenseman of the New York Rangers, wears a special football-type shoulder pad in all National Hockey league games. The pad protects his injured collarbone which sidelined him for seven games.
