Casting Stones

A&M's rush toward building a great athletic empire was slowed down Saturday. Whether the action taken by the South-west conference faculty committee was too severe or not, the entire proceedings were kept too much in the dark. As much as the former students and others concerned might be to blame for the charge of illegal recruiting, the faculty committee is even more to blame for the star chamber procedures used in the case. If A&M is to be accused of wrong and penalized for this wrong, those of us who are vitally interested in A&M's future should know who is accusing us and what specific sins we are charged with. As the great books says, "Let he who is without sin cast the first stone."

A Good Job

Civilian students at A&M not only saved their prestige, but they raised it with the healthy support given the Civilian weekend. The Civilian Council had taken a chance on this, the first of a planned annual event, feeling sure that the civilian students would support the weekend.

And the council was right, as the spectators watching the tug-o-war, the contestants in the beard growing and ugly man contest, and the good crowd at the dance proved. A job well done by the persons planning it, and an event well supported by the persons for whom it was planned.

Congratulations

Congratulations are due the A&M baseball team for their brilliant showing in the conference race this year. The win over Southern Methodist university yesterday was a bright ray over the gloomy clouds brought by the penalty imposed upon athletics at A&M by the Conference faculty committee. The whole school will be backing the Aggies as they take on the University of Arizona team in the division playoffs for a berth in NCAA competition.

Group Requests New Underpass

The Accident Prevention committee, in closing up its activities for the year, has recommended a study of the possibility of an underpass at the railroad crossing on the road to the veterinary hospital and the airport. An underpass at this crossing has been considered before, and the committee felt that increased traffic there because of the moving of all the veterinary facilities across the tracks made an underpass even more necessary. The committee, which is headed by Bennie Zinn and represents all phases of campus life, also recommended that "the college not allow any type of aircraft to land on the campus, except in an emergency." On two different occasions this year the committee's report said,

The new A&M chapter of Iota Lambda Sigma, national honorary industrial education fraternity, will have its installation Thursday night in the Memorial Student Center ballroom.

Thirty-six students will be initiated into the new chapter, which will be the first undergraduate chapter of the fraternity in Texas. Installing officer for the ceremony will be Dr. Glenn Smith from Oklahoma A&M college.

Temporary officers are Burl Purvis, president; Bill Powell, vice president; and Carl Livesay, secretary-treasurer. These officers have led the year-long planning for the installation of the fraternity here. Regular officers will be elected later.

Council Sets Study Of Insect Control

College Station Mayor Ernest Langford last night appointed a three-man committee consisting of Joe Sorrels, chairman; J. C. Gaines, head of the entomology department; and L. E. Winder, city sanitation inspector, to study the city's present mosquito-spraying program and decide if the program is worth continuing. The city now rents a spraying machine and an operator from Bryan.

The council passed the new itinerant merchant ordinance which will require all merchants who are not residents of the city to post a $1,000 bond, secure a $50 license and give a 10-day notice before coming into the city.

The ordinance will not recognize A&M students as residents, but it will not affect selling in the dormitories, as these are under the control of the state.

The ordinance does, however, refer to the selling of merchandise at the North Gate street corners, and requires these people, including students, to go through the licensing procedure.

In other action, the council rezoned lots on Jersey street southwest from Highland street to old highway 6, turning them into business plots. The council also adopted the proposal that the State of Texas would accept the costs of constructing the actual pavement, curbs, sewers, and sidewalks in front of the College, for widening highway 6, if College Station would pay for the remaining improvements.
