

'The Champs'

Aggies Celebrate Victory

Lawrence Sullivan Ross would have turned over in his grave last night if he could have seen how the Aggies lived up to being "soldiers, statesmen, and knightly gentlemen."

The last out announced by radio station WTAW, which clinched the 1955 Southwest conference baseball title for the Aggies, brought a mighty roar from the entire student body.

Before the last echoes had died out, students were streaming from the dormitories where they had been glued to their radios, "sweating out" the ball game with Southern Methodist university. Then bedlam broke loose.

Yell practices started everywhere on the campus. A few students made it to The Grove; most of them just let loose wherever they happened to be.

Tissue paper was strewn along lawns and streets, as the students let the world know that no ruling could strip them of this championship.

By 8:30 last night, most students had finally settled down. Probably everyone, anyway, but the engineers at WTAW. They were having to reshelve the radio law books they had pored through during the game, trying to find some legal way to stay on the air if the game ran overtime. They had to go off at 7:15 p.m.

Luckily, John Stockton and Tex Vanzura solved their problems.

And come to think of it, Ole Sul probably would have been celebrating too.

Education Director To Speak at CHS

F. B. Culpepper, director of the field service of the Texas State Teachers association, will address the Education Commission of the A&M Consolidated school district at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Topic of the speech will be "Recent Texas Legislative Action Affecting our Schools."

Recent recommendations of the Texas Research League, a privately sponsored educational organization devoted to research in the field of public administration, will be discussed by Dr. L. S. Richardson, superintendent.

Implications of the recommendations will be presented by C. A. Bonnen, president of the school board; J. Skrivanek, principal of the high school; and W. T. Riedel, principal of junior high school.

All adult residents of the A&M Consolidated school district are invited to attend.

helicopters and light army aircraft have landed on the campus.

The committee felt that this could constitute a definite safety hazard, mentioning that the army airplanes had made their landing approach over the A&M Consolidated school during school hours.

To start its report, which was addressed to the president, the committee said that "we believe the committee has helped correct many bad habits and remove many hazards from the campus."

"We have received excellent cooperation from many departments on the campus," the report continued, "particularly the office of physical plants and the buildings and college utilities department."

The report recommended that the committee be continued next year, and that it be supplemented with a sub-committee composed of a representative from each department on the campus.

Such a sub-committee has been in operation this year, and "we think that if this group should be continued, more and more people will become safety conscious and will stimulate their fellow workmen to pay attention to the hazards on the campus," the report says.

The committee recommended five replacements in its membership, the addition of a civilian student representative, and the replacement of the cadet corps commander with the cadet corps safety officer.

Holdovers on the committee for next year will be Herman Segrest, Larry Cobble, B. F. K. Mullins, and Ralph King. Bill Fullerton, editor of The Battalion, will also be a member.

The Accident Prevention committee was organized three years ago.

UGLIEST OF THE UGLY—Bob McClary, of Pasadena, above, beat out a tough field of five finalists to be named A&M's ugliest civilian student, as a part of the first annual Civilian Student weekend.

Knights of Columbus Elect Manning, Koehl

Bob Manning, junior electrical engineer major from Dallas, will be next year's grand knight of College Station council No. 3205, Knights of Columbus.

Manning will take over his duties at an installation of officers next September.

Other officers elected were Jacob Koehl, deputy grand knight; Clyde Wharton, chancellor; John Ferguson, recorder; Bert Hoff, treasurer; Don Dierschke, advocate; Richard Dilts, warden; Bob Peters, inside guard; Jules Cabeen and Bill Cooper, outside guards; and John Hammonds, of Bryan air force base, trustee.

Other offices—chaplain, lecturer, and committee heads—will be filled by appointment by the grand knight.

Dierschke, as present grand knight, and Raymond Broussard, as past grand knight, were the regular delegates from the local council to the Knights of Columbus state convention in Houston last week.

Other members of the Council who attended the convention as visitors were Harry Kalina and Johnny Petter.

HEAVE—Showing just why they won the tug-o-war contest, the 20 team members from Law hall are shown pulling the Puryear hall team over the line. More than 500 spectators gathered to watch this part of the Civilian weekend. The tug-o-war was held Friday between teams from each civilian dormitory.
