The Dark Ages

Things don't look too good for A&M as things now stand.

With everyone and his brother out to stop us from building up a decent athletic program, the legislature is considering a bill which will prevent us from building the kind of scholastic program we need.

No matter how many good points the bill has, the fact is that A&M needs more money for expansion of programs and better salaries than the new bill will allow.

A&M is a technical school, and the unit cost per student is higher than for a liberal arts school. With the legislature basing salaries on an "out of date" formula of student enrollment, the college has no chance of getting the appropriations it needs. Student enrollment is fine, but when a student attending school here raises the costs above that of other schools, something has to give. And, let's not give away our good faculty members to other schools who can offer better salaries.

The best hope for changing this standard formula is apparently going to be in the hands of the Texas Commission of Higher Education. This group has plans underway to make a restudy of the formula, and possibly to formulate a plan so that the difference in financial costs between a school like A&M and a liberal arts school can be adjusted.

If a student can get more out of A&M, the legislature should be willing to put more into the school.

News Briefs

THE ENTOMOLOGICAL society will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in room 105 of the Academic building to see the presentation of the $100 Texas Pest Control association scholarship, awarded each year to a junior entomology student.

CLIFFORD LA MOTTE, A&M graduate student, has been named a Danforth graduate fellow, one of 58 selected from the nation. The fellowship is given for study toward a teaching career.

TRANSFER of pupils to the College Station schools must be completed before June 1 for Brazos county residents, according to the principals of the schools. Transfer forms are available at the principals' offices.

Civilian Chaplain To Be Named Soon

The Civilian Student Council will announce the person chosen civilian chaplain at its final meeting of the year at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday.

The council also will hear the final report of the first annual Civilian Student weekend, the council budget, and will criticize and evaluate the past year's activities of the council.

Recommendations for next year's civilian program and next year's council will be made, and the Mother's day reception will be discussed.

Appropriations

This created a problem, particularly in the graduate field. The conference report on H. B. 140 reduced this requirement by requiring governing board approval only for undergraduate classes less than 10 and graduate classes less than five students.

The bill also changes the travel regulations by converting from a detail itemization of meals, hotels, and other expenses, to a $7 per diem basis. The prior limit was $6 if out overnight, or a limit of $4 for meals if not out overnight. Dewey is sponsor of a bill that would put provisions regarding travel that are written in this appropriation bill into a basic station.
