

Train Trouble

College Station is about to lose its daytime railroad service if the Texas Railroad Commission grants Southern Pacific the authority to stop the "Sunbeam" trains.

The Sunbeam, which runs between Dallas and Houston, with two stops at College Station, is the only daytime passenger train in this area. The northbound and southbound night trains will still be around, but not many people will be too happy about going south around 4 a.m. or north around 1:30 a.m.

The railroad company has a reason for asking for removal of the Sunbeam trains. The trains have piled up heavy losses over the past several years, they say.

The passenger traffic has switched to bus, airplane and private automobile, complains the company.

On the other side of the fence, the people who will be affected if the trains are removed also have a cause to complain.

One of the biggest complaints would probably come from A&M students who are used to having their girlfriends come here via rail.

Whatever is decided, and it will be up to the Texas Railroad Commission, both sides of the fence must be looked behind. When looking at the company's figures of losses, the Commission should keep in mind efficiency and type of service rendered. And the validity of the passengers' arguments against removal of the trains must be weighed.

The Commission should set their sights on a fair decision, and keep going toward that decision.

And on that decision will rest the fate of how some of us will be going and coming.

strength would decline more rapidly if I took such a task upon my shoulders.

"When it became known throughout Mississippi that I had decided to accept the presidency many protests were sent to me and many of my friends called and insisted that I spend the balance of my days at home. I finally yielded and declined the presidency with regret."

President Davis, at the suggestion of the board of directors, presented the name of Thomas S. Gathright for the presidency of the college. Gathright was at that time superintendent of public instruction in Mississippi. He was elected and became the first president of Texas A&M—taking office in 1876.

Recreation Council Registration Heavy

Registration is exceptionally heavy this year for most of the activities sponsored by the College Station Recreation Council, according to reports from chairmen of the various committees. More registrants are expected after the Bible schools close this week.

Swimming lessons led in enrollment with 395 children signed. About 130 of these are in the beginning class.

One hundred and eleven children registered for tumbling instruction under Bud Mathews. These are divided into two classes.

W. M. Dowell, tennis instructor, has 65 beginners and 11 advanced players. The classes will be represented in the district meet of junior open tennis at Lufkin this weekend by Don Avera and Jerry Mills.

Twenty young people and 11 adults have registered for golf lessons. They will be taught by Joe Fagan, college golf coach.

Interest in baseball is high this summer. There are two American Legion teams instead of the usual one. There are eight Little League teams, four major and four minor, with 175 boys in all.

A large crowd enjoyed the first family night at Lincoln School. The program featured a movie and also magic tricks by James Baldauf.

Twenty-five boys and 15 girls registered to play softball. In the play group for children under 10 there were 14 who enrolled, and 15 girls are in the home economics class.

Tuesday night at 8 p.m. there will be a teen-age dance on the slab by Lincoln School.

According to Mrs. E. C. Klipple, plans are being made for the annual community picnic, which will be held this year on Friday, July 1. The program will begin at 5:30 p.m., and a fireworks display will begin at 8 p.m. on the new football field. Everyone in the community will be invited to attend the show.

Several members of the College Station Kiwanis Club will go to Brenham tonight for the chartering of the new Kiwanis Club in that city.

The new club is sponsored by the College Station and Navasota Kiwanis clubs.

At their luncheon next Tuesday, the local Kiwanians will make plans for their annual "sport shirt day," with the shirt judged "loudest" to get a $1 award for its owner.

Mrs. Nancy Larson and Mrs. Fay Neale won first and second prizes respectively at last week's meeting of the Aggie Wives Bridge Club.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Joy Jones and Mrs. Barbara Jones.
