

Russian Group To View A&M Herds

Three members of the Russian group which has been touring north and middle western U.S. farming areas will visit A&M soon.

According to information from D. A. (Andy) Adam, administrative assistant for foreign programs, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the group will be in San Antonio Thursday to buy 40 or more head of Santa Gertrudis cattle.

After they buy the cattle they will come to A&M to see the college herds and to talk with staff members. While here they will plan the next phase of their tour, to see hereford and shorthorn cattle.

This visit is a result of the recent flying trip which Vladimir W. Matskevich, first deputy minister of agriculture for the U.S.S.R., made to Texas recently. He was particularly impressed with the Santa Gertrudis breed, which was developed by King Ranch and is the only breed of beef cattle to be developed completely in America.

In the party which will visit the campus are: Youri Golubash, livestock specialist with the group; Dimitri Kostuchin, commercial counselor to the Russian embassy in Washington, and Georgi Bolshakov of TASS news agency.

The group was met in San Antonio by a delegation headed by Bob Briggs, San Antonio contractor and vice-president of the Santa Gertrudis Breeders' International, and R. P. Marshall of Kingsville, executive secretary for the same organization.

Twenty-Nine Start Workouts At Consolidated

Twenty-nine boys began football workouts Monday at A & M Consolidated High School under new coach Horace Shaffer. Their first rough workout was Wednesday.

Two-hour workouts are being held twice each day to prepare the team for their first game here Sept. 9 with Hempstead.

Nine of last year's lettermen, five of whom were starters, are returning. They are Garland Andrews, Norman Floeck, Manuel Garcia, Dick Hickman, Bobby Johnson, Ed Linton, Alfred Linton, Jack McNeely and Bobby Witcher.

Newcomers who are looking good in practice, according to Shaffer, are quarterback Edgar Feldman, fullback Billy Kavanaugh, center Steadman David and right halfback Bill Hall.

The record of the team last year was five won and five lost during the season. In district play they won two and lost three.

Knebel Replaces Abrams in Ag Ed

Dr. Earl H. Knebel will join the Department of Agricultural Education at A&M Sept. 1. He replaces Dr. Morris N. Abrams, who recently resigned to accept a position in Louisiana.

Knebel received his Doctor of Education degree in August from Oklahoma A&M with a major in educational administration and agricultural education.

For six years he taught at Hamilton, where he compiled an excellent record as a teacher of vocational agriculture. It was during this period in 1951, that he received the MS degree from Texas A&M.

During the past year Knebel has served on the staff of the Agricultural Education Department at Oklahoma A&M.

His doctoral dissertation dealt with "An Analysis of Factors Contributing to Effective Programs of Vocational Agriculture."
