

Traditional Rival

The last game of the football season for us is rolling around tomorrow afternoon.

This is a big game for us, for it's with our traditional rival from Austin, the University of Texas.

And the Southwest Conference Championship is at stake. To add to all of the excitement we have the bonfire burn-and yell practice tonight.

And a packed stadium tomorrow to watch the "Game of the Day."

It all looks like one of the biggest weekends that A&M has ever seen.

A lot has been said about the necessity for students and others on the campus to keep in mind that their actions will reflect back upon our school.

Texas' campus newspaper, The Daily Texan, has carried at least one article this week definitely placing Aggies as the agitators of trouble. (They failed to mention Saturday's incident after the freshman game in the same issue that carried the story about how Aggies' express their spirit.)

Fortunately, opinions expressed in their paper are those of the student editors, not of UT's administration or possibly of the majority of their student body.

If we don't prove anything else tomorrow afternoon (and we're betting we will by two touchdowns), let's at least give the DT something else to write about.

A 'Little Extra'

There's little we can add to the glory of the wonderful gesture of appreciation that is symbolized in the Faculty Distinguished Achievement Awards, which were awarded yesterday by the Association of Former Students.

We can only offer our congratulations to the winners. And sing a hymn of thanks for such a loyal group as are our former students.

Verbal praise can bolster the ego, but recognition for outstanding work has been accorded to five members of the faculty in a way that really means a lot. And $500 is a lot of recognition.

Nobody enters the teaching profession to get rich, for it has been said that the profession has its own rewards.

Thanks to the former students, a "little extra" has been added to that reward.

AWARD WINNERS—Winners of the Faculty Achievement Awards for this year are, left to right, Travis J. Parker, professor of geology; Fred E. Ekkfelt, professor of English; Robert J. Skrabanek, associate professor of rural sociology; Wayne C. Hall, professor of plant physiology; and W. D. (Pete) Hardesty, business manager of student publications. Also in the picture is David H. Morgan, president of the college. The awards were presented by W. L. Ballard, president of the Former Student Association.

MOSCOW—Five former associates of the Stalin era police boss, Lavrenty P. Beria, have been executed in Soviet Georgia and two others have been sentenced to life imprisonment, Tiflis radio announced yesterday. The broadcast did not make clear just what the charges were against the seven men, identified only by their last names. But the radio report from the Georgian Republic, home state of both Beria and Stalin, indicated the men were accused of conspiring with Beria, who was executed in December, 1953, on charges of plotting to seize power in Moscow.

LONDON—Britain took off the diplomatic kid gloves yesterday and bluntly accused Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin of hypocrisy in his latest pronouncement on German reunification.

BERLIN—West Berlin's Glider Club—irked by an Allied ban on gliding—disclosed yesterday it has made a gliding agreement with Communist East Germany. The agreement will permit the club's 1,200 members to freely enter East Germany and use its state-owned gliders.

TOKYO—The government said yesterday it will cease, temporarily, approving contracts for export cotton goods to the United States. The move was designed to quiet complaints that Japan is flooding the U. S. market with cheap cotton goods.
