Challenge to Youth

D. H. Lawrence, writing on a different theme, once put into words a challenge which is present for every student of every American college and university. This was: "Let Americans turn to America, and to that very America which has been rejected and almost annihilated. Do they want to draw sustenance for the future?"

These words were written in the hope that America would develop its own literary culture. We repeat them here in the hope that such a conference as next week's Student Conference on National Affairs will draw attention to the youth of our colleges. For it is us, the youth of America, who will have to shoulder the responsibility of carrying forward the hope of mankind for peace.

A clarion call exists in the challenge we have before us. Our generation has been called the "Silent Generation," born in the depths of depression, raised in the holocaust of war, slapped with charges of delinquency, and condemned for not concerning ourselves with the continual infringements on civil rights.

Many of these charges, and others, we have to answer for; many of the answers can be found by retracing the footsteps of our forerunners, by looking back to the disillusionment of those that preceded us. They must share the blame for the past; upon us rests the responsibility for the future.

We are shaped by our environment. Look at today's world, at the effects visible in our own nation of events halfway around the world. The United States has apparently awakened to realize that the decadent philosophy of isolationism—bequeathed to us by near-sighted heroes of old—is no longer valid in an ever-shrinking world.

We have been silent on many issues—issues which have been so big that they have all but crushed our fathers.

But we're beginning to feel the strength of our muscles and our brains. And we're beginning to wonder about the situation existing in our world.

We're beginning to speak, using—as in SCONA—the experience and mistakes of the past as our guide.

COL. THOMAS L. CRYSTAL, professor of philosophy at the U. S. Air Force Academy, Denver, Colo., will serve as a roving observer at next week's Student Conference on National Affairs. He received his BS from the U. S. Military Academy in 1934 and his MA from Columbia University in 1949. Col. Crystal has served as assistant professor of international relations, Department of Social Sciences, U. S. Military Academy; and participated in the planning for and development of the first student conferences on U. S. affairs at the Academy.

straight shots as Allen took a 67-60 lead with 5:05 left to play.

Heller grabbed a rebound and passed to Roberts for two points and Swisher sunk a lay-up on a fast break that found four Aggie freshmen down court to but one Academy man. Montemayor and Collier pushed through a field goal each. Swisher hit two clutch free throws to cut the lead to five points.

The Fish bobbed a chance to get closer as they took the ball out of bounds, but lost it to the Ramblers. Collier captured a stray A&M pass and turned it into an easy two points. Diago meshed a set shot from in front of the circle and hit a beautiful two-handed shot from deep in the right corner after Roberts had stolen the ball. Collier dumped the last two-pointer for Allen. Diago sunk a lay-up, but time ran out before the Fish could get in another shot.

The Fish play their first home game next Wednesday against the University of Houston Kittens in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

OMEGA

Seamaster®

Preferred by all active men who seek a dependable self-winding watch

The weakest point in ordinary waterproof watches is the fit of the crystal. Under extremes of temperature it expands or contracts. Each little opening permits dust or dampness to penetrate. The steel-rim, pressure-fitted Seamaster crystal maintains a perfect seal under all conditions. The unique Hydro-Seal back and Hermetic Crown give additional immunity. Of all water-resistant watches we consider the Seamaster best.

Omega is the official watch of the Olympic Games.

In stainless steel and 14 karat gold, $95 to $775. Federal tax included. Silver-white or black dials, also calendar-date models.
