Committee Appointed For Cotton Research

A committee of men prominent in Texas cotton business and industry has been named to aid the Cotton Research Committee of Texas in finding better ways to improve and market Texas cotton.

The group of men appointed as advisors will review research programs on cotton improvement and marketing being carried out cooperatively at Texas Technological College, the University of Texas and Texas A&M College. Advisors will be asked to determine areas in which research is meeting the needs of the state's cotton economy and to suggest new fields for study. The committee was chosen to bring about a closer relationship between industry and business and the research agencies of the Cotton Research Committee.

Membership consists of Burriss C. Jackson, Hillsboro cotton ginner and oil mill operator; R. O. Beach, Houston cotton merchant and member of the Houston Cotton Exchange; Elliott Knox, vice-president of the New Braunfels Textile Mills; E. C. Cox, chief of the cotton laboratories of U.S. Testing Company, Dallas; Dr. Earl Berkeley, director of Anderson, Clayton and Company's fiber and spinning laboratories, Houston; Aubrey Lockett, Vernon banker, cotton ginner and producer; W. R. Watkins, Abilene cottonseed oil producer; Jack J. Stoneham, Dallas cotton merchant and member of the Dallas Cotton Exchange; and Otto Goedecke, Hallettsville cotton merchant.

In the programs of research conducted by the Committee, the University of Texas is primarily responsible for work in the area of marketing procedures; Texas Technological College for improvements in textile technology and Texas A&M, for breeding, cottonseed processing utilization.

Membership of the Cotton Research Committee is composed of Dr. M. T. Harrington, chancellor of the Texas A&M College System, chairman; Dr. Logan Wilson, president of the University of Texas and Dr. E. N. Jones, president of Texas Technological College. K. Lanse Turner, Lubbock, is director of the committee.

Methodists First In Membership

Additions totaling one-tenth of the net membership have been made at A&M Methodist church during a seven month period beginning June 1, 1955.

The new additions have kept the church in first place leadership in membership increase in the Bryan district.

The additions classified by type include ten persons coming by profession of faith, ten from other denominations and 51 transferring from other Methodist churches.

The church is also proud of operating persistently in the black for many months with regard to finances, according to Louis J. Horn, publicity chairman. Receipts received monthly assure an annual designated operating total of $22,500.

Letters

at least 25 Aggies in line giving their names, type of blood, and where they might be reached. Within a couple of hours a former student had an oxygen tent there from Houston.

"The College Security officers stood by and gave escort when something was needed from another hospital, and the chaplains stayed until in the night praying with the family and comforting them.

"Many times I have watched with awe the Aggie Spirit at football games; Saturday and Sunday I watched that same Spirit meet a crisis, and I was even more impressed.

"May I register my son for the Class of '76."

Sincerely,
Leta Barkley Harper
