a sophomore and now have two children, Russell, 12 and Lynda, 8. Barney just happened on to the job he now holds. In the summer of 1947, with one semester remaining toward his degree in Agricultural Economics, Welch met Spike White, then director of intramurals, and worked as an umpire for him.

White was on his way up to director of student activities, and, with his old job soon vacant, offered the position to Barney. Welch accepted and took over the day after graduation in January, 1948.

"It was strictly fate that I got this job," says Barney, "I was only a semester away from graduation with absolutely no idea what I was going to do when Spike offered me the job."

A&M's intramural director didn't need fate to carry him up the military ladder. Welch started as a private in 1942 and came out of the war a T/Sgt. Since then Barney has held every possible rank to the captain bars he now wears on his shoulders as Company Commander of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 143rd Infantry Regiment, 36th Division of the National Guard.

Barney played some service football in Europe, receiving all-European Theater of Operations honors before returning to his halfback spot under Coach Homer Norton in 1946.

A Texas boy who played his high school athletics at Stephenville, Barney has developed A&M's intramural program into one of the top five in the world.

Aggies everywhere can tip their hats to Barney Welch and the magnificent job he does as A&M's director of intramural athletics.
