

Folklorists Have Smorgasbord At 7

The 40th annual meeting of the Texas Folklore Society opened this morning in the assembly room of the Memorial Student Center.

Seventeen papers are being read during the two-day meeting, which will end tomorrow at noon. A smorgasbord will be held at 7 tonight, followed by talks by Roy Bedichek of Austin and Dr. Stith Thompson of the University of Indiana. A play given by five members of the Aggie Players will also be presented.

Two A&M English professors will read papers tomorrow morning. Sid Cox will relate "Bee Lore" and Charles Hurley will present "The Wild Man of the Navidad."

All sessions except tonight's smorgasbord are open to the public.

Rodeo Continues at 8 Senate Meeting

The second performance of the seventh annual Texas A&M Intercollegiate Rodeo will get under way at 8 p. m. tonight.

A&M is being represented by a six-man team consisting of Don Turner, A. G. Olbre, Rodney Butler, Jack Bridges, Curtis Burlin and Henry Prenal. These men were chosen by members of the Rodeo Club at a meeting earlier this week.

Every night after the rodeo, Aggie Rodeo Club members are sponsoring a dance at Fellowship Hall honoring visiting teams.

Fellowship Hall is located about two miles northeast of Bryan on the Tabor Road. Music for the dances will be provided by Walter Miers and the Aggie Ramblers. The public is invited to attend these dances.

Tickets are on sale in the MSC, Office of Student Activities, Twelfth Man Inn, Loupot's, Cooley's Conoco Station or from any member of the Rodeo Club. Tickets for the rodeo are $1 for adults and 60 cents for students and servicemen.

conjunction with the Mother's Day activities, which are handled by the Social Committee.

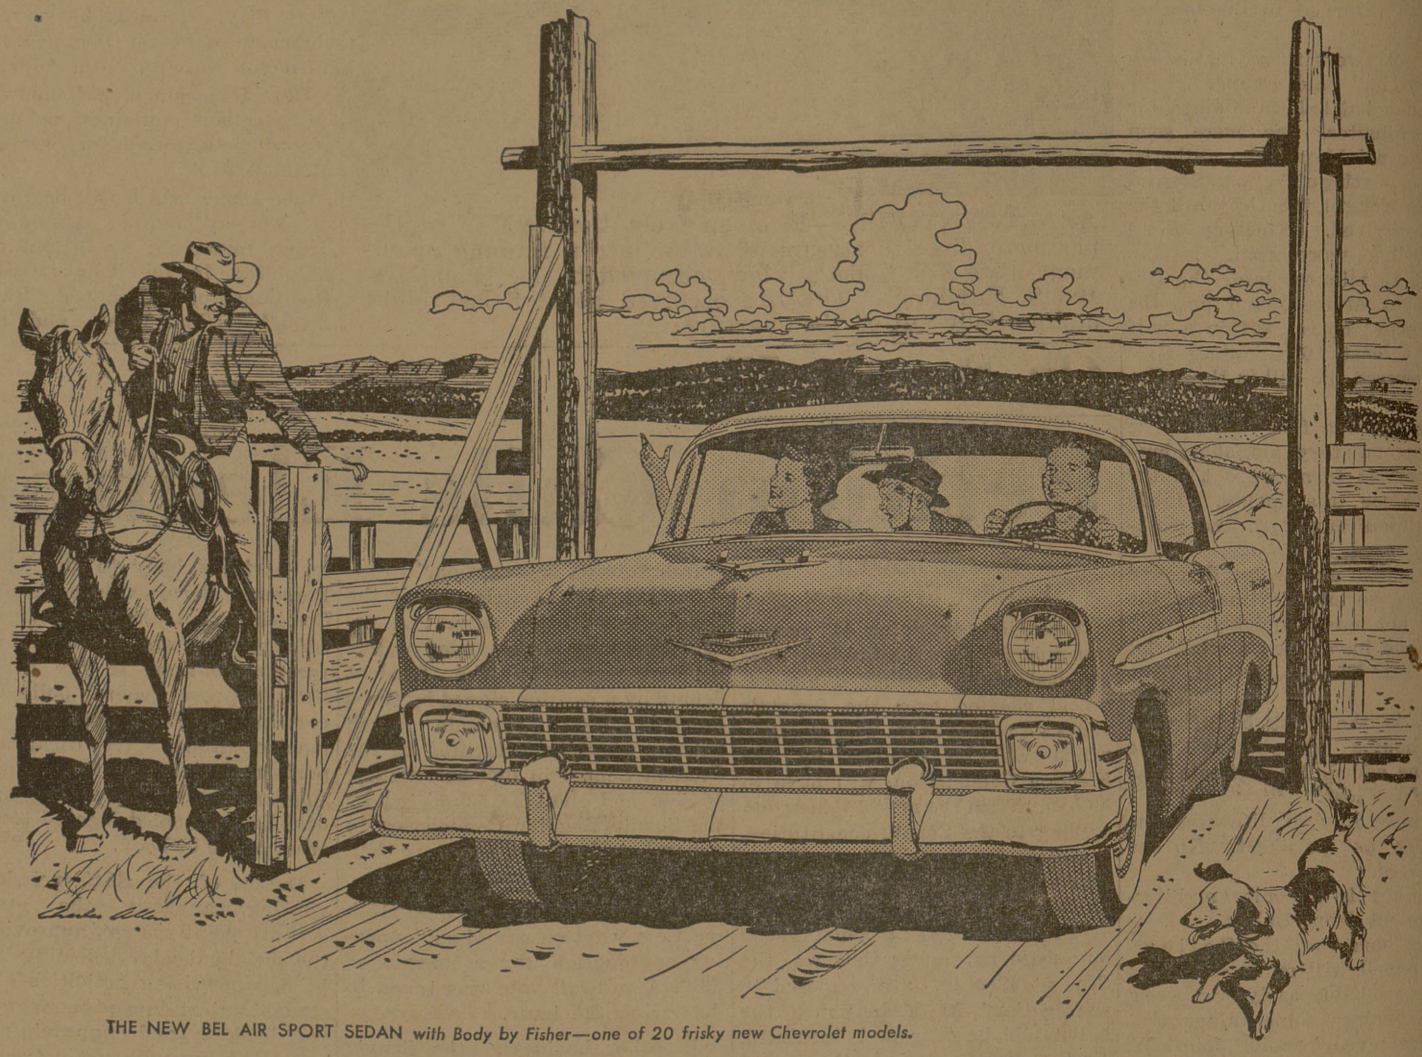

Nominations for the award will be accepted in the Student Senate Office, located on the second floor of the YMCA, by any student starting today. No deadline has been placed on nominations.

Dr. Charles Lyons, College Hospital superintendent, was commended for his treatment of William Fred Curry, freshman injured in a gymnastics accident recently. The Welfare Committee will take voluntary contributions to help Curry financially.

A vote to "pledge support" to the Aggie Follies, during Mother's Day activities, was also passed at the meeting.
