

New Crop of Stars

Unknowns Carry Hopes in Olympics

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK—The United States may be bidding for Olympic gold medals this year with a lot of sprinters, jumpers and weight throwers who were unknowns as recently as a year ago.

The dashes, the jumps and pole vault and some of the weight events have come to be American specialties in the Olympics—just as the Central Europeans have dominated the longer running races in recent years. And in those events there's a brand new crop of star performers threatening world records and ready to take over in the Melbourne games.

THE MOST NOTABLE example is Dave Sime, a strong 19-year-old sophomore at Duke University. Dave developed his legs as a baseball player in Fair Lawn, N. J., and wasn't heard of as a sprinter until he broke the indoor 100-yard record last January.

Within the past month, Sime has broken the world records for the 220-yard dash with a 20.1 seconds clocking, the 220-yard low hurdles with 22.2 and then equalled the listed 100 and 220-yard records of 9.3 and 20.2 on the same day.

SIME ISN'T THE only college athlete to flash from obscurity within the past year. California's Leamon King, another sophomore, also has equalled the world 100-yard record this spring. Don Stewart, a Southern Methodist U. freshman, has become the No. 1 high jumper—against strong competition—two Kansans, senior Bill Nieder and sophomore Al Oerter, are threatening weight-throwing records; Boston University's Cliff Blair has broken the listed hammer throw record, though he's still short of the mark unofficially credited to a Russian. Even some high school kids are getting into the act.

Stewart's best jump this year listed by National Collegiate A.A. statisticians is 6 feet, 10 1/4 inches—nearly two inches above the Olympic record.

Score, Indians Club Bosox, 6-3

CLEVELAND—Herb Score and Don Mossi Wednesday pitched the Cleveland Indians to their first triumph of the season over the Boston Red Sox, 6-3.

The second-place Tribe increased its lead over the third-place Bostonians to 1 1/2 games.

Score, gaining his fifth triumph in eight decisions, held the Red Sox to six hits, none of which did any damage. But the American League strikeout ace lost his control in the eighth inning, walking in one run on four bases on balls.

McAfee, (3) R. Ransdell.
 440-yard relay: (1) Den 4, Pack 802 and the Webelos.
