Disabled Vets Guests

Thirty patients from the Veterans Administration Center at Temple, will be guests of A&M and the Athletic Department at the football game here Sept. 22, between Villanova and the Aggies.

The group will have special seats on the cinder path on the 50-yard line.

They will be met by P. L. (Pinky) Downs Jr., official greeter for the college and will have lunch and an evening meal in Duncan Mess Hall. This will mark the eleventh game patients will have attended at A&M. Soft drinks will be served during the game and each will receive a football program.

"This is one way we have of paying tribute to those men who have given so much that we may continue to enjoy the blessings of a free nation," Downs says.

Ike Starts Second Term Race, Issues Call For New Crusade

GETTYSBURG, Pa.,—President Eisenhower kicked off his second term drive yesterday with a plea to party leaders to "change a campaign into a crusade" and rally millions of voters to the Republican banner.

A crowd of more than 500 of the GOP elite cheered the President enthusiastically as he expressed confidence the party will win in November if there is enough hard work.

In a vigorous, happy mood, Eisenhower said "don't let our people down by writing off as hopeless any contest, by conceding any area. This is the road to stalemate or to defeat."

He spoke in a big, flag-decked tent pitched in a rolling meadow about 200 yards from his farm home.

Eisenhower made no attack on the Democrats. He left that to Vice President Nixon and Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the GOP National Committee, who also spoke.

Nixon hit out at Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee, for suggesting, as Nixon put it, that there is no real peace and then suggesting the possibility of abolishing the draft.

"That," said the vice president, "is the height of political fakery and irresponsibility."

Hall told the chuckling audience that Stevenson and his running mate, Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, are out on "a strange honeymoon for the ticket that was united in the shotgun ceremonies in Chicago last month."

The GOP chairman also turned his fire on the campaigning of former President Truman, which he called a "travesty on statesmanship."

Hall added, "I feel confident the people of the United States will see through the sham and hypocrisy of the Democrat song-and-dance team of Adlai, Keef and Harry."

Dressed casually in a tan sports coat and brown trousers, Eisenhower got a rousing round of applause at the outset of his talk by reporting on his health.

He said he wanted to answer a question that many people have been putting to him, and then declared:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I feel fine."

In calling for a new crusade to lead the party to victory in November, Eisenhower referred to it as he did in accepting the nomination in San Francisco—as the party of the future. He said it is best suited for the management of the American government.

Eisenhower, as well as those who spoke ahead of him in reporting on the party's outlook, placed much emphasis on need for getting voters registered and to the polls.

"We want the decision of America, not the decision of the minority," the President declared, rapping his knuckles against the lectern.

That touched off another big round of applause among the campaign leaders assembled here from all parts of the United States.

Nixon went into the question of whether or not—and how—the Republicans should reply to Democratic campaign attacks.

"Where Democrats commit distortion or misstatement" Nixon said, "it is our responsibility to correct the record."

With Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Nixon on the platform with him, the President got another laugh with an allusion to the victory the Democrats scored in the Maine election Monday.

Eisenhower said the Republicans "have a great party" with "people working all the way from Los Angeles to Maine."

Then he caught himself and said with a chuckle regarding his mention of Maine: "That's a bad word."

Before the speaking program started, Eisenhower wandered happily among his guests, shaking many hands and calling greetings to old friends.

After the speech Eisenhower was all but mobbed by the surge of Republican workers to the platform.

Eisenhower said the campaign now getting under way "concerns the management, the direction, the conduct of a mighty Republic."

He added that it also represents "the life and death interests of 168 million human beings, engaged in a fantastically complex 400-billion-dollar-a-year economy, endowed with a mission to champion human freedom and human rights in a world where no other power today is able to sustain that mission."

"I think our fundamental effort," he declared, "should be this: Every Republican, every independent, every discerning Democrat, every thinking citizen regardless of his past or present political record can, should, must be persuaded to vote Republican on Nov. 6."

He added, "This year's entire campaign will be an appalling exercise in futility if during its course we should get people to the boiling point, brimming with enthusiasm and zeal, only to find out on election day that they cannot vote because their names are not registered on the polling books."

Kefauver To Take 'Truth-telling' Tour

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A Democratic campaign leader announced in Washington Kefauver will embark on a 15-state "truth-telling" tour beginning tomorrow.

James A. Finnegan, Democratic campaign manager, said the people "are entitled to know the truth about the sorry performance in office of the special interest Eisenhower-Nixon administration."

The tour will take Kefauver into virtually every section of the nation. Vice President Nixon starts on a similar cross-country swing next Tuesday.

Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall, in a speech at the Gettysburg rally, said GOP workers should use "good old-fashioned shoe leather" in the campaign.

And referring to Stevenson, Kefauver and Aruman, Hall said he believed Americans "will see through the sham and hypocrisy of the Democrat song-and-dance team of Adlai, Keef and Harry."

Kefauver, on the other hand, said Stevenson is setting a "great pace" in the campaign, and if "we all back him up, we will have a great victory."

Meanwhile, Sen. Gore (D-Tenn) said the Senate Privileges and Elections subcommittee, which is looking into federal election practices, announced all major political organizations will be asked for a detailed report on campaign funds as of Oct. 1.

Poultry Science Club Invites New Members

"We want to double membership in the Poultry Science Club this year and make everyone feel that he is part of the organization," said senior Don Brockman, president.

Anyone interested in poultry science may join the club, regardless of his major, Brockman said. For instance, he explained that agricultural education majors have been active members. He also urged graduate students to join the club.

"Through the Poultry Science Club this year we want to show freshmen what great opportunities there are in the poultry husbandry field. Recently there have not been enough graduate available to fill all the jobs open," Brockman said. "Also, Brockman hopes that many students will be interested in annual poultry judging contests entered by junior and senior teams. The A&M senior team won second place in competition in Chicago last year, and the juniors participated in a contest in Starkville, Miss.

"Our goal this year is 'Beat Arkansas,'" Brockman said. Arkansas teams placed first in both the junior and senior poultry judging contests last year. C. R. Ryan, assistant professor of poultry husbandry, is coach of the junior team; and Ed Parnell, professor of poultry husbandry, is coach of the senior team.

The Poultry Science Club also sponsors an annual chick show each May and honors graduating seniors with a barbeque.
