

Students Poor Voters According To Survey

College students rate only a little higher as voters than the average citizen, says a recent survey of 1,300 Students by Look Magazine.

The poll, taken at 24 colleges, shows that only two out of five college students eligible to vote for the first time in the coming presidential election plan to do so.

The survey, in the October issue of Look, discloses that 24 per cent of students are undecided as to party choice, while 34 per cent showed no interest in who will be the next vice president.

Even more striking are figures that list three out of 10 students with no presidential choice.

The survey in Look also came up with these findings:

Most first voters—71 per cent—admitted that their choice of a candidate would be "strongly influenced" by the candidate's personality and appearance.

The students' views were "nebulous" on the political effectiveness of television and radio—22 per cent of them were "completely in the dark" as to whether television and radio influenced them or not.

When queried on their chief complaint about the Democratic and Republican parties, almost 50 per cent of the students "found this too remote or complicated, or plain political" to express an opinion.

Thirty-eight per cent of those polled, didn't seem to know, or care, what there was to admire about either the Democrats or Republicans.

Volcanic Hot Foot

HILO, Hawaii (AP)—A tourist from Los Angeles stuck his foot in the mud and came up with a volcanic hot foot here. While touring the site of last year's volcanic eruptions on this largest of the Hawaiian Islands, the visitor's right foot sank into a mud puddle and he came up with first and second degree burns. Hawaii volcanologist Dr. Jerry Eaton said the area still percolates at 200 degrees some 18 months after the eruption.
