

WEEKEND ACTIVITY—College Station fireman directs a stream of water on the last of a minor fire in Hensel Park Saturday. The blaze was spotted by two Campus Security officers at 2 p.m. Saturday.

LIFE INSURANCE FOR PILOTS And All Other Flying Personnel

Under a new Federal law, there is no more Government life insurance for persons entering the Armed Forces after January 1, 1957. Neither on a free nor a pay-for basis. Many insurance companies will insure military ground forces at standard rates—so will we. There has been a rather universal rule, though, that fliers have to pay considerably more for their life insurance than do the strictly mundane creatures who keep their feet on terra firma. One of the reliable life insurance companies which I represent has found, based on several years of experience with all types of military personnel, however, that it can insure pilots and student pilots at standard rates and still make a profit for its stockholders. The company does make this reservation—since military flying is recognized in insurance circles as being an extra hazard, and particularly so during the training period: If the insured pilot is killed in an aircraft accident before his age 26, then the amount payable to his beneficiary is only one-half the face amount of the policy. If killed after age 26, the policy pays off in full. . . . All flying personnel, other than pilots, are insured at standard premium rates, with full payment in event of death at any age any cause (excepting suicide in the first two years). . . . With flight training now for ROTC students at A&M, we know that many of them will want life insurance that will cover them throughout their flying career. They can buy the very low premium Ordinary Life, or 20 Pay Life, or other plans through my office at standard premium rates, and make their premium payments out of their ROTC Contract checks every three months. Premiums run as low as $3.00 per month, depending on how much insurance the student wishes to have—and can afford. . . . Call EUGENE RUSH at VI 6-0066 or VI 6-5656 for an appointment to talk the matter over, or come by his office above A & M Photo Shop at the North Gate, College. No obligation to buy.
