Nehru Is Out As Possible SCONA Head

Nehru is definitely not coming to A&M for the Student Conference on National Affairs in December, according to the four man delegation who extended the invitation to him.

They were told by G. L. Mehta, Indian Ambassador to the U. S., that Nehru's schedule was already completed and he will not be coming to the United States until Dec. 16, one day after the conference ends.

However, the Washington trip made by the SCONA members was successful in that Victor Andrade, Bolivian ambassador to the U. S., consented to come to A&M for the conference and be the main speaker. Andrade is considered by many Washington sources to be one of the most capable diplomats in the District of Columbia.

One of the high points of the delegations trip to the nation's capital was a visit with Justice Tom Clark to make arrangements with him to give a talk at A&M as a Great Issues speaker. A tentative date in the spring was set.

W. L. Kleb Chosen For Borden Award

Wallace L. Kleb, senior veterinary student from Houston was named to receive the 11th annual Borden Award for the sixth year vet student with the highest scholastic average at a recent meeting of the A&M chapter of the American Veterinary Association, according to Dr. W. W. Armistead, head of the School.

Kleb, a former Aggie track star who now has a 2.97 grade point ratio, will have his name engraved on a permanent bronze plaque in the Veterinary library as well as receiving $300 and a certificate.

CS Police Report

LITTLE STORIES WITH BIG MORALS

First Little Story

Once upon a time when the inventors of the airplane were very small boys, the roof on their house developed a terrible leak. A repairman was called to fix it. He set his ladder against the side of the house, but it was a very tall house and his ladder was not quite long enough to reach the roof.

"Sir, we have an idea," said the boys who even at that tender age were resourceful little chaps. "We will get up on top of the ladder and boost you up on the roof."

So the boys climbed to the top of the ladder, and the repairman came after them, and they tried to boost him up on the roof. But, alas, the plan did not work and they all came tumbling down in a heap.

MORAL: Two Wrights don't make a rung.

Second Little Story

Once upon a time a German exchange student came from Old Heidelberg to an American university. One night there was a bull session going on in the room next to his. "Ach, excuse me," he said timidly to the group of young men assembled there, "aber what is that heavenly smell I smell?"

"Why, that is the fragrant aroma of our Philip Morris cigarettes," said one of the men.

"Himmel, such natural tobacco goodness!"

"It comes in regular size in the handy Snap-Open pack, or in long size in the new crushproof box. . . Won't you try one?"

"Dankeschön," said the German exchange student happily, and from that night forward, whenever the men lit up Philip Morris Cigarettes, he never failed to be present.

MORAL: Where there's smoke, there's Meyer.

Third Little Story

Once upon a time Penelope, the wife of Ulysses, had herself a mess of trouble in Ithaca. With her husband away at the Trojan War, all the local blades were wooing Penelope like crazy. She stalled them by saying she wouldn't make her choice until she finished weaving a rug. Each night when her suitors had gone home, Penelope, that sly minx, would unravel all the weaving she had done during the day.

Why don't you fade in this urn?

Well sir, one night she left her rug lying outside. It rained buckets, and the rug got all matted and shrunken, and Penelope couldn't unwind it. When the suitors came back in the morning, the poor frantic woman started running all over the house looking for a place to hide.

Well sir, it happened that Sappho, the poetess, had come over the night before to write an ode about Penelope's Grecian urn. So she said, "Hey, Penelope, why don't you hide in this urn? I think it's big enough if you'll kind of squinch down."

So Penelope hopped in the urn, and it concealed her perfectly except for her hair-do which was worn upswept in the Greek manner.

Well sir, with the suitors pounding on the door, Sappho had to move fast. She whipped out a razor and cut off Penelope's hair. The suitors looked high and low but they couldn't find Penelope.

MORAL: A Penny shaved is a Penny urned.
