

Our Part of the Game

Foremost in the heart and mind of every Aggie is a deep desire to watch the University of Texas go down in utter defeat tomorrow afternoon in Memorial Stadium.

Truly this will be a fitting climax to end the football season and especially these last ten days of hard preparation for this game.

Our motives certainly are strong enough. There is the so-called Memorial Stadium Jinx to be broken and on top of that, the longest and most relentless rivalry in the Southwest Conference will meet head-on.

But at least while in Austin, Aggies will do well to remember the famous inscription at the base of "Sully" which begins with "Soldier, Statesman and Knightly Gentleman."

What could be more fitting than to remember the inscription on "Sully" that has so many times been smeared with orange paint and to use it as our guiding thought while in Austin?

Nothing else could serve better as a reminder to all of us that although we want to win this game above all others, we have a responsibility to our school, its traditions and everything else connected with A&M that we hold to be sacred.

Granted that the derogatory remarks usually heard at this game are hard to take and would stir the anger of anyone possessing school loyalty.

But believe it or not, with every remark and temptation to fight that is shrugged off, comes a feeling of self satisfaction that far outweighs the monetary anger caused by some petty remark.

A&M so far has had a most successful year. Poor judgment, hasty action and no thought to the future tomorrow afternoon could spoil it all.

The team will do its part on the field. It's up to us to match their efforts in the stands.

English Conservatives Rap US Eastern Policy

LONDON, (AP) — An influential section of the Conservative party in Parliament yesterday attacked U. S. Middle East policy as "gravely endangering the Atlantic Alliance."
More than 100 Conservatives, about one-third of the party's strength in the House of Commons, signed a motion criticizing both the U. N. and the U. S. attitude toward the Suez Canal crisis.

There was an impression, however, that Conservative party whips (floor disciplinarians) disapproved of the motion as unnecessarily critical of the United States.

Yet leaders raised no objection to placing it before the House for formal consideration later.

The motion praised Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, who is expected back from U. N. sessions in New York in time to make a statement in Parliament Thursday.

"This House congratulates the foreign secretary on his efforts to secure international control of the Suez Canal," the motion read,

"and deplores both the resolution of the General Assembly calling for immediate and unconditional withdrawal of British and French troops from Egypt and the attitude of the U. S. A., which is gravely endangering the Atlantic Alliance."

Man with Problem; Blonde Chases Him

NEW YORK, (AP)—What's a man to do when a goodlooking blonde chases after him, pounds on his door, and even appears in the middle of the night beside his bed? Henry N. Rowley knew what to do. He called a cop.

And the blonde, Aelene Wabur, 28, who lives across the street from Rowley, appeared in Magistrate's Court today on a disorderly conduct charge, fetchingly dressed in a black velvet treader outfit. "She has a fixation on me," Rowley testified. "One night, she nearly gave me a heart attack. That night I was sleeping in my bed, and I woke up and there she stood before me."

Said Magistrate John E. Prendergast, "Why don't you leave him alone?" He asked her how she pleaded to the disorderly charge.

"Well," said the blonde, "I plead partly guilty."

"It's all or nothing at all," the Magistrate said.

When she couldn't make up her mind, Prendergast adjourned the case to Jan. 15 and placed her on parole.

HAPPY TALK

As we all know, conversation is terribly important on a date. When lulls in the conversation run longer than an hour or two, one's partner is inclined to grow logy — even sullen. What, then, does one do?

If one is wise, one follows the brilliant example of Harlow Thurlow.

Harlow Thurlow prepares. That is his simple secret. Before the date, he goes to the library and reads all 24 volumes of the encyclopedia and transcribes their contents on his cuffs. This he makes sure that no matter what his date's interests are, he will have ample material to keep the conversation alive.

Take, for example, Harlow's first date with Priscilla de Gasser, a fine, strapping, blue-eyed broth of a girl, lavishly constructed and rosy as the dawn.

Harlow was, as always, prepared when he called for Priscilla, and, as always, he did not start to converse immediately. First he took her to dinner because, as everyone knows, it is useless to try to make conversation with an unfed coed.

So he took her to a fine steak house where he stoked her with goblets of Black Angus and mounds of French fries and thickets of escarole and battalions of petits fours. Then, at last, dinner was over and the waiter brought two finger bowls.

"I hope you enjoyed your dinner, my dear," said Harlow, dipping into his finger bowl.

"Oh, it was grandy-dandy!" said Priscilla. "Now let's go someplace for ribs."

"Later, perhaps," said Harlow. "But right now, I thought we might have a conversation."

"Oh, goody, goody, two-shoes!" cried Priscilla. "I been looking everywhere for a boy who can carry on an intelligent conversation."

"Your search is ended, madam," said Harlow and pulled back his sleeves and looked at his cuffs to pick a likely topic to start the conversation.

Oh, woe! Oh, lackaday! Those cuffs on which Harlow had painstakingly transcribed such diverse and fascinating information — those cuffs were nothing now but a big, blue blur! For Harlow — poor Harlow! — splashing around in the finger bowl had gotten his cuffs wet and the ink had run and not one word was legible! And Harlow broke out in a night-sweat and fell dumb.

"I must say," said Priscilla after several silent hours, "that you are a very dull fellow. I'm leaving."

With that she flounced away and poor Harlow was too crushed to protest. Sadly he sat and sadly lit a cigarette.

All of a sudden Priscilla came rushing back. "Was that," she asked, "a Philip Morris you just lit?"

"Yes," said Harlow.

"Then you are not a dull fellow!" she cried and sprang into his lap. "You are bright! Anybody is bright to smoke such a perfect doll of a cigarette as today's rich, tasty Philip Morris, which is brimming-full of natural tobacco goodness and fresh unfiltered flavor. . . . Harlow, tiger, wash your cuffs and be my love!"

"Okay," said Harlow, and did, and was.
