

Law Plans To Nab Public Fund Yeggs

(Ed. Note—This is the fifth in a series of articles explaining the need, and description of, a series of bills proposed by members of the Texas Press Association.

These bills are concerned with items which have become of prime concern to the people of our State in the past few years and in some cases, months.)

Bill No. 6 will provide for the indictment, and prosecution of persons accused of misusing or embezzling public funds or concealing public funds in the county where the violation occurs, or in an adjoining county or in Travis county.

This bill is not new in this feature, but rather is modeled after a rape statute allowing indictment in any adjoining county within the judicial district as the one where the offense is committed.

The reason for this feature being tied on a bill of this type is apparent. The case could be tried away from the scene of the crime and away from the friends and relatives in the same courthouse. This would provide the calm and deliberate attention of a grand jury, free from local prejudice and politics. It would at the same time, preserve our concept of local self-government.

If such a law had been in existence several years ago, corruption in Duval County could have been stopped and several innocent men who are now dead would still be alive.

(Ed. Note—Write your representative urging his support of these vital bills as an aid to our Democracy.)

of personal service. Items in the personal service category included such offenses as shining shoes, running errands, waxing floors and pressing shirts. Every sophomore and freshman in the company was questioned by Military Panel which began session at 1:15 Tuesday afternoon and continued meeting until 1 a. m. Wednesday.

Findings and recommendations of the Panel were submitted to Col. Davis yesterday where they were "approved except for minor changes in a few of the recommendations."

"Hazing and the associated practices of requiring personal service and disciplinary exercises of freshmen are clear violations of the college regulations and will bring prompt and effective punishment whenever they are proven," Col. Davis said.

ART DIRECTOR

she began studying again.

After receiving his master's degree in 1950, Mrs. Terry's husband opened an art supply store. Now he sells supplies and, in the words of his wife, "is a very good critic and painter himself." Terry has had some pictures hung in exhibits over Texas.

In addition to 35 A&M students in her classes, Mrs. Terry also instructs a class of children, some of whom are less than 10 years old. Her adult classes include at least one octogenarian. There are now 80 students in all.

"My ziggist thrill in this work is to see the Aggies taking an interest in the shows we bring here," she says. "I guess I'm proudest of the Wildenstein show we had in 1953. That one included a half million dollars worth of old masters with paintings by Renoir, Van Gogh and Valasquez."

"We have won our share of prizes," she said, "but most of all we have learned to 'see' things and enjoy them. That's worth the whole effort. Now I'm interested in seeing that the students get more time and room to keep expanding the program."
